Denies Politics; to Enter States of Senators Who Fight Expansion.

Believed Confident Of East's Support

Approves Census Funds Before Taking Train at Hyde Park.

By Franklyn Waltman.
Staff Correspondent of The Post.

En Route to Pacific Coast with President Roosevelt, Sept. 22.—Still insisting his trip had no political significance, President Roosevelt tonight was speeding westward to Chicago preparatory to entering the States of some of the Senate opponents to his Supreme Court plan.

Whatever politics there will be on this swing across the country will come after the President and his party cross the Mississippi River—and, incidentally, the presence aboard this train of the largest and most distinguished newspaper contingent ever to accompany Mr. Roosevelt, except in a campaign year, testifies to the widespread anticipation that there will be politics in abundance.

But tonight the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with their immediate party, were, for all appearances, just a group vacation-bound to the Northwest country on a visit to their children. And yet the fact that Mr. Roosevelt proposes to concentrate his time and whatever effort he puts forth in the Far Western States is politically significant.

Believed Sure of East.

It indicates, in the view of observers, that the concern is over the opposition manifested toward him by Western Senators and that he is satisfied he still has popular support in the East. Most of his trouble in the last session of the Senate came from the Western Senators.

Although he is an old friend and well-known to those parts, this crowd gave him a fair round of applause as he climbed the ramp to his special car. His son, John, and the latter's fiancee, Anne Lindsay Clark, in riding togs, came down to bid farewell to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Approves Census Funds.

Before leaving Hyde Park, the President conferred with John Biggers, director of the unemployment census, giving his approval to general plans for the enrollment of the jobless which will be taken this fall. Mr. Roosevelt also announced formation of a national institution to co-ordinate efforts in fighting the dread infantile paralysis, of which he has been a victim.

Biggers, after conferring with the President, said the lattter had approved an allocation of $5,000,000 for the unemployed census; that the work of enrollment would be done chiefly by the Postoffice Department through the distribution of questionnaire cards to 31,000,000 families in the Nation and that he hoped the count would be completed before December 1.

Biggers also said Roosevelt would make a special appeal to the jobless of the Nation to co-operate by returning the questionnaire cards, which he said would be simple, yet sufficiently comprehensive to indicate the exact situation among the jobless. He said the President would make at least one radio speech and that each card sent out would bear a brief message over Roosevelt's signature.

Not Invited to A. F. of L. Convention

The name of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was omitted for the first time in five years from a list of speakers invited to appear at the A. F. L. convention at Denver next month. Miss Perkins is reported to have disagreed with President Green on an appointment to the International Labor Office in Geneva, and on other matters.

President Starts Foundation to Fight Paralysis

Text of Statement—Page 6.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N.Y., Sept. 22.—President Roosevelt, concerned over epidemics of infantile paralysis, announced today he was forming a national foundation to "lead, direct, and unify the fight on every phase of this sickness."

He said he had enlisted the "sincere interest" of several Representatives and outstanding individuals who are willing to initiate and carry on the work of the new foundation and its personnel would be announced as soon as it is completed.

In a formal statement made public prior to his departure for the West coast, he said:

"I have had reports from many areas in which this disease is again spreading its destruction, and once again there is brought forcibly to my mind the constantly increasing accumulation of ruined lives—which must continue unless this disease can be brought under control and its after effect properly treated."

He said the new organization would see to it:

That every responsible research agency is "adequately financed" to carry on investigations into the cause of the disease and preventive methods, including the recently developed nose-spray.

That every effort is made to eliminate much of the needless after-effects of the disease—"wreckage caused by the failure to make early and accurate diagnosis of its presence."

That studies are made to "develop every medical possibility of enabling those so afflicted to become economically independent," in their local communities.

Cases Reach Peak.

By the Associated Press.

The Public Health Service reported yesterday 879 new cases of infantile paralysis for the week ended September 18, a peak for the year.

Despite the increase in the number of new cases over the total reported for the previous week, officials said the advent of cooler weather had slowed the rapid gains made by the disease. New cases reported for the wek ended September 11 had climbed to 817 in comparison with the 641 new cases reported for the week ended September 4.

Heroine of 'Thrillers' Who Made Realty Fortune Victim of Cancer.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 22.—Ruth Roland, who turned quietly from life as a queen of silent screen "serial thrillers" to a $3,000,000 career in real estate operations, died today after a five-month illness.

Her family said she suffered from cancer.

Miss Roland, 39, entered pictures in 1912 after brief experience on the stage in her home town of San Francisco. She rose to stardom in the popular chapter-a-week movies of that period, vying with such other stars of that pioneer era as Grace Cunard, Pearl White Marie Malcamp and Helen Holmes.

In the early '20's, Miss Roland retired from the screen and invested all her motion picture earnings in real estate and at one time reputedly had property worth $3,500,000.

Thrilling roles which brought her screen fame featured her as the heroine in such serial adventures as "Ruth of the Rockies," "The Timber Queen," "The Avenging Arrow," "Red Circle," "Tiger's Trail," "Who Pays?," "Haunted Valley," "White Eagle," "Love and the Law," "What Would You Do?," and "Ruth of the Range."

District Veteran Selected to Head Legion 40 and 8

Ferdinand G. Fraser, of 78 K street northwest, yesterday was elected Chef de Chemin de Fer of the "Forty and Eight", American Legion, at its convention in New York.

He is the first Washingtonian ever to head the celebrated "fun and honor" society of the Legion. He succeeds Harry E. Ransom, of West Allis, Wis., and was elected virtually without opposition.

A native of Illinois, Fraser is an employe of the Veterans' Administration. He was born in Chicago.

He has been commissaire intendent of the Forty and Eight Society here for 14 years.

Franco Holds Paris Consul; Tension High

The War in Spain.

Spanish insurgents detained the French consul at Malaga in retaliation for the arrest of a high Spanish insurgent officer for plotting to steal a Spanish government submarine.

The French foreign office said measures were being taken to prevent the killing of an anti-Fascist editor at Tunis, in a fight with Italian sailors, from creating new friction between France and Italy.

Britain feared Premier Mussolini was preparing to send more troops to Spain to offset the diplomatic setback he suffered in the Mediterranean antipiracy patrol.

The Spanish government announced its southern army had invaded Badajoz Province along the Portuguese frontier.

French Consul Detained.

By the Associated Press.

Bayonne, France, Sept. 22.—The arrest of a high Spanish insurgent officer for plotting to steal a submarine docked at Brest put a severe strain tonight on relations between France and the insurgents.

In retaliation for the arrest of Maj. Julian Troncoso at Bayonne the insurgents detained Pierre Bertrande Desmartis, French consul at Malaga.

Just what insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco intended doing with Desmartis was not learned. He was warned not to leave the consulate pending further notice.

A strong guard watched over Maj. Troncoso, governor of three insurgent provinces in Spain, and patrols along the French frontier were strengthened to avert any possible attempt to rescue him.

The major was charged with scheming to steal the Spanish government submarine C-2, which had just finished repairs at Brest.

Police here raided the villa of the Marquis de Linares, father of Capt. Antonio Linares, who escaped over the mountain trails to Irun when Maj. Troncoso was arrested. The Surete Nationale kept close watch on a large colony of Spanish insurgent sympathizers along the French Basque coast.

Anti-Fascist Editor Killed.

Paris, Sept. 22 (AP).—The foreign office said tonight measures were being taken to prevent the killing of an anti-Fascist editor at Tunis, in a fight with Italian sailors from creating new friction between France and Italy.

In Tunis three Italian sailors were charged with murder and complicity in murder today for the killing of Joseph Miceli, editor of the anti-Fascist newspaper Italiano di Tunisi, published in the French protectorate.

A foreign office spokesman said France would seek settlement of the incident through diplomatic channels to hasten conciliation started by Italy's acceptance of an agreement to confer in Paris about the Mediterranean antipiracy patrol.

Duce May Strengthen Force.

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—Diplomatic quarters expressed fears tonight that Premier Benito Mussolini might send more troops for the Spanish insurgent armies to offset the diplomatic setback he suffered in the

American Envoy Returns to Post, Now Says He Fled of Own Accord.

Text of Statement—Page 5.

By William V. Nessly.

Official indignation here over the Japanese onslaught on China, particularly over the aerial bombing of Nanking, yesterday brought a pronounced stiffening in this country's attitude toward the Tokyo course, manifested in two striking moves:

1. Secretary of State Hull addressed a sharp, denunciatory note to the Japanese Government, declaring the attack on the Nanking population is "contrary to the principles of law and of humanity," and warning that Japan will be held strictly responsible for any damages that might result to American property.

2. United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, whose departure from the American Embassy at Nanking had caused a wave of criticism, returned to the embassy with his staff and prepared to remain there in defiance of the Japanese warning to move to areas of "greater safety," a warning which Hull's note bluntly rejected.

Not Ordered to Return.

Johnson's return to the embassy was not directed by this Government, it was said at the State Department, and he had not been informed that his withdrawal had caused criticism in this country.

Johnson, in a report made public last night by the State Department, took full responsibility for his boarding the gunboat Luzon at the time the Japanese warning was issued, and said a published statement attributed to him "is incorrect in saying I was going on board the Luzon under orders of the department."

Secretary Hull's note, delivered to the Japanese foreign minister by Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, followed oral representations against the announced plan to bomb Nanking, which were made through both Ambassador Grew at Tokyo, and Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito here.

Scoffs at "Solicitude."

"The American Government objects," the note said, "both to such jeopardizing of the lives of its nationals and of noncombatants generally, and to the suggestion that its officials and nationals now residing in and around Nanking should withdraw from the areas in which they are lawfully carrying on their legitimate activities."

It held, moreover, that "in view of the wide area over which Japanese bombing operations have prevailed, there can be no assurance that even in areas to which American nationals and noncombatants might withdraw they would be secure."

In effect, it scoffed at Japanese assurance that "the safety of lives and property of nationals of friendly powers will be taken into full consideration" during the bombing.

Dr. Butler Urges 'Free People' To Unite in Fight on Fascism

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 22.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler tonight called on the free people of the world to face the challenge of the three fascist states—Japan, Italy and Germany—which he described as more menacing than Communist Russia.

Dr. Butler, speaking at the opening of the 148th academic year of Columbia University, of which he is president, declared "neutrality would be immortality" in any contest between democracy and fascism.

"The challenge to believers in liberty is imperative and instant," he said. "The attempt of the dictator to extend his authority over other lands and other peoples must be met and faced by free people who have been stirred to see, to understand, to think and to act.

"There is no other way in which the paradox of despotism can be brought to an end. In such a contest between ruling ideas and the policies which they compel, all nations and every human being are involved, whether that fact be at once realized or not."

Compared with "the active and carefully thought out" demonstrations of ambition and power by the dictatorships of Japan, Italy and Germany, he said, the dictatorship of Communist Russia "is far less threatening."

"Moreover," he declared, "the Communist doctrine is wearing out in Russia itself . . . Communism means a return to the civilization of the jungle and is an open war upon excellence and achievement of every sort and kind. For these reasons it affronts human nature, and we may be sure that human nature will have none of it."

The Fascist form of despotism, he said, has "a seductive power which the despotism of Communism does not share."

Speaking of Japan, Germany and Italy, Dr. Butler declared:

"The people of those three countries have the right to adopt and accept, each for itself, whatever form of government they prefer, but they have no right to endeavor by force to extend their power and their form of government over other and unwilling peoples."

Quezon Defies Court Decisions For Employer

Cuts Off Government Work From Men Who Refused Death Compensation.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Sept. 22.—President Manuel Quezon, angrily denouncing "inhumanity" of a court decision, today ordered government contracts withheld from an employer who won a legal victory over a family seeking compensation for the death of a worker.

The employe drowned while attempting to carry out orders to recover a piece of lumber from the Passig River. The employer won two court decisions, making it unnecessary for him to pay $500.

Quezon's face flushed and his voice trembled as he criticized the Philippine judiciary.

"If judges are going to decide cases like that," he shouted, "we are going to have a revolution in the Philippines."

"It has been charged," he continued, "that I am a Mussolini. If I were, I would get rid of such judges. A twentieth century jurist who handles law as one in the sixteenth century belongs in the cemetery."

Quezon stated he was not prepared to say whether President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan was right or wrong, but that he intended to see the Philippine judiciary kept "in step with the times."

Black Inquiry 'Impertinence,' Says Cummings

Says Other Justices Not Investigated by Justice Bureau.

By Robert C. Albright.

Admitting Justice Department failure to investigate qualifications of Hugo L. Black either before or after the former Senator's appointment to the Supreme Court, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday said such an inquiry would have been an "act of impertinence."

Facing a 15-minute barrage of newspaper questioning, Cummings defended his department's failure to inquire into the Alabaman's alleged Klan connections, as the new associate justice, holding himself incommunicado aboard ship, sped homeward to attend opening sessions of the court.

"No investigation was made at the time Justices Hughes, Cardozo and Brandeis were appointed," he

D. C. Man Admits Shooting Witness To Store Robbery

Twenty-four hours after the shooting of a witness to the holdup of a District Grocery Store at 4400 Georgia avenue northwest, Washington police last night announced the arrest of a suspect who, they said, confessed.

According to police, the man gave his name as Edwin H. Bruce, 29, of the 200 block of Ninth street southeast.

The suspect was arrested in Alexandria where he was being held last night pending identification by Harry Gildenhorn, 51, proprietor of the grocery store from whom the bandit forced the release of $25 from the cash register.

Police said Bruce was arrested after he pulled a pistol on a taxi driver in Alexandria.

During the holdup, Paul Standish, 28, of 4520 Fourteenth street northwest, was shot in the leg as he attempted to follow the robber from the store.

Gang Breaks Jail Second Time, Escapes in Chase on Trial Eve

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Three convicts, accused of executing a series of bank robberies since they fled last year from Missouri's State Penitentiary, broke out of Cuyahoga County Jail today in an effort to escape a trial in which Federal authorities planned to seek their deaths.

Joining in the flight of the trio—Charles Bird, 26; his brother, Frank, 30, and James Widmer, 31—was a 19-year-old youth accused of murder, Theodore Slapik. Slapik was captured an hour and a half later after a wild ride in a stolen automobile through downtown Cleveland in which a woman pedestrian was struck and seriously injured by the convicts' car.

Incarcerated in a fourth-floor cell block of the tower-like jail, the men suddenly whipped out three revolvers and a knife, locked two deputies in a cell, wrested their keys from them, unlocked a corridor and descended in an elevator to the basement.

The fugitives dashed from the front door of the jail, which is in downtown Cleveland. Four blocks from the jail, their commandeered coupe collided with another machine. The men, brandishing guns, leaped to the running board of Municipal Judge Louis Petrash's car. They pulled the judge from his seat and roared toward Public Square, a mile from the jail.

Nicky Gets His Giraffes, Susie Wins a Mate As Zoo's Ship Docks After Perilous Voyage

By Gerald G. Gross
A Staff Correspondent.

Four handsome Sudanese specimens are included in the wild animal argosy which arrived here this afternoon, headed for National Zoological Park in Washington, following a thrill-packed seven weeks' voyage from the East Indies.

GROSS.

Loaded with rare leopards, lethal cobras, a komodo dragon and a wide variety of other valuable beasts, the freighter Silverash's most wonderful passengers, nevertheless, probably are the baby giraffes, as far as Nicky Arundel is concerned.

For the past year the young son of Russell M. Arundel, secretary to former Senator Metcalfe, has campaigned for "a giraffe for our Zoo," in his neighborhood organ, "Nicky's News," and now his crusade has succeeded fourfold. The giraffes, along with their more than 1,000 shipboard colleagues, are expected to arrive in New York Saturday or Sunday.

Dr. William M. Mann, Washington Zoo director and leader of the strange argosy, had hair-raising tales to tell, after I swung aboard the Silverash 10 miles at sea, of encounters with hostile craft in the Mediterrean, a terrific monsoon in the Indian Ocean, a heat wave in the Red Sea that prostrated supposedly heat-resistant monkeys and a mid-Atantic gale which sent cages filled with huge jungle cats slithering to and fro across deck.

Yet when the 5,200-ton British freighter brushed gently against her pier this afternoon, not only were Dr. Mann and his associates on the National Geographic Society-Smithsonian Institution expedition to the East Indies in perfect physical condition but virtually every animal was in tip top shape, from the little bat parakeets which sleep hanging upside down to the stolid Chinese alligator whose like probably has never been exhibited in an American Zoo.

The Silverash is bringing a new husband for Susie, Washington's orang-utan who was widowed last year. Aboard, too, is a prospective wife for the Capital's barking deer, as well as numerous other suitors arranged for by matchmaker Mann.

Japan carried out her threat to bomb Nanking in disregard of American, British, French and German protests.

Secretary of State Hull addressed a sharp note to the Japanese government, declaring the Nanking attack is "contrary to the principles of law and humanity."

United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, whose departure from the American embassy at Nanking caused a wave of criticism, returned to the embassy with his staff and prepared to remain there in the face of the Japanese warning to move to areas of "greater safety."

Great Britain was reported weighing resurrection of the Washington nine-power treaty guaranteeing China's territorial integrity in a drastic effort to end the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Bombs Kill 200.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Sept. 22.—Japan's threat to rain death and destruction on China's capital was carried out today in disregard of American, British, French and German protests against unrestricted bombing of a great city.

More than 50 Japanese planes took part in two raids, killing or wounding more than 200 Chinese civilians, mostly in the poorer quarters of the city. Scores were burned to death as incendiary bombs lighted tinder-like straw huts along the Yangtze River.

Most of those who died were too old or feeble to join the great exodus to the open countryside.

After the raids United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, accompanied by his entire staff, returned to the embassy from the gunboat Luzon, to which he had withdrawn Monday when the Japanese gave warning of their intention to subject Nanking to devastating air bombardment.

U. S. Embassy to Stay.

The ambassador indicated he and his staff now intended to remain ashore.

In the far south the Japanese air force also struck with deadly effect at Canton, where it was feared more than 300 persons, nearly all civilians, had perished in four big air raids. Foreign observers told of piles of bodies in the streets and of scenes of panic and disorder at the railway stations as throngs tried to flee from the city.

The Japanese raiders were over Nanking a total of four hours, bombing and fighting spectacular combats with the Chinese who rose to meet them.

Four Raiders Shot Down.

Chinese officials said four raiding planes were shot down, one in the congested heart of the city, one outside the city walls, one on the Yangtze waterfront and the fourth across the river at the Pukow railway station.

On each raid the Japanese dropped more than 100 bombs, but a survey after the attacks showed that all important public buildings had come through unharmed. Most of the bombs were dropped from

Wallace Promises Farmers an Income Equal to Share Before World War

AAA to Stress Profits of Soil, Forget Prices

New Program Is Based on Regions Instead of Separate Crops.

By Russell Smith

A "new Department of Agriculture" dedicated to carrying "research into action" yesterday was committed by Secretary Henry A. Wallace to a program designed to give American farmers the proportional "share of the national income which they received for the 50 years before the World War."

Wallace said flatly that the AAA goal of parity prices has been abandoned for a parity income goal.

Such a goal, he said, will be sought on a regional rather than on a crop basis. He said it has been found impracticable to determine what constituted parity income for a cotton farmer, a wheat farmer, or the producer of any single crop, whereas it can be decided with some accuracy what constitutes parity income for, say the Southeastern region of the United States.

Sees Need for Aid.

He said he believed it will be necessary for several years for the Government to give "adjustment payments" to the Southeastern farmers because the percentage of cotton going into export trade, with resultant necessity for selling at world prices, is greater than for any other major crop.

He added, "I don't think there is any way of getting enough money out of the Treasury to give farmers parity prices during the next ten years for cotton, wheat, corn, hogs or any other product that is exported," hence the emphasis on income.

Wallace devoted most of the conference to an explanation of the aims toward which the 1938 soil conservation program will be directed, and chose cotton as an illustration.

Departs From Rule.

He stressed, at the outset, that cotton "departs most greatly" from other crops included in the 1938 program, in that a drastic acreage cut is provided. This is at once an example of Federal direction of an effort to preserve the soil from destruction and to reduce the carryover to a wieldy figure, he said.

A 1938 carryover of 9,000,000 bales, as against a pre-war average of 4,000,000, is indicated for next August 1, he said. The new program, it is hoped, will reduce this to 7,000,000 bales by August 1, 1939.

Wallace said the average cotton yield per acre "now is about 190 pounds, whereas a few years ago it was about 170," as a result of better farm and soil practices. He is confident a similar situation exists with respect to corn, but is not sure about wheat.

"A higher yield per acre means a higher yield per man-hour of labor," he added, "and that is one of the things we have got to aim for if we are going to have prosperity on a permanent basis."

Japan Purchases Less.

He disclosed that Japan had bought but 33,000 bales of American cotton to September 15, whereas last year at that time it had taken 119,000, but he said this does not necessarily mean a reduction in total exports. Ht pointed out that Japan may be buying from India, thereby leaving a market with Great Britain for an equivalent amount of American cotton. A change in the acreage suggested for cotton in the 1938 program, therefore, is unlikely.

Finally, the Secretary said "we take a great deal more interest in exports and foreign markets than the general public would ever believe, from what they read about us." He pointed out that the department is "circumscribed" by the necessity for raising form income.

In a speech list night Wallace said that the department "must express itself continuously in terms of action which will best conserve the soil, feed the cities, and build a farm civilization which will forever serve as the foundation of democracy."

Roosevelt's Trip West May Be the Most Important One of His Whole Career.

By Franklyn Waltman

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The transcontinental tour on which President Roosevelt departed today for several reasons may turn out to be the most important trip on which he has ever embarked. On the success of this trip—that is, from Mr. Roosevelt's viewpoint—may depend the future of his Administration.

Mr. Roosevelt's viewpoint in regard to this trip is very important.

WALTMAN.

Some days ago he insisted his purpose was "intake" and not "output." He meant by those terms that he wished to test public reaction to him and to his program and would not be primarily engaged in seeking to shape or formulate public opinion.

Even though the President proposes to make several speeches during this two-week swing through the country, the primary objective of the trip apparently remains one of "intake." Thus when Mr. Roosevelt addresses a crowd from the rear platform of his train it is to be expected that he will be watching intently the reactions of that crowd to him.

It is a difficult and momentous undertaking that Mr. Roosevelt has set for himself. It is difficult for any President to gauge public sentiment toward him. It is particularly difficult for Mr. Roosevelt, whose infectious smile and charm draw people temporarily toward him and who generally is regarded as a national hero.

Human curiosity brings out people to see the President of the United States, especially in those sections of the country where he seldom visits. The courtesy and respect due to the Presidency dictate that such crowds shall be hospitable and generous with their applause. How can Mr. Roosevelt tell whether such a crowd approves his Supreme Court reorganization plan or his desire to set up a minimum wage board? People may like him, but not those undertakings.

I do not know how Mr. Roosevelt can accurately gauge the sentiment of the crowd. Yet I think he can do it. All successful political practitioners have a sixth sense. Political intuition, it might be called. It is like having a hunch. The successful politician can sense the reaction of the crowd almost as soon as he commences speaking. You can do it or you cannot—there is no explaining it.

Mr. Roosevelt is supopsed to have that ability in an extraordinary degree. Whether he has, this trip will demonstrate, because it is assumed that he will shape his future course in accordance with the soundings into public sentiment that he registers on this trip. If he guesses wrongly, we will know shortly after Congress meets.

There are some observers who do not believe that the President is especially talented in that respect. They admit he has accurately responded to public sentiment in the past, but they hold that it was the late Louis McHenry Howe who made the soundings. They point out that since Mr. Howe's death Mr. Roosevelt has not been so accurate in gauging public sentiment.

At all events, Mr. Howe on Presidential trips concentrated on being the President's eyes and ears and—perhaps—his sixth sense. He always took up his position to one side of the rear of the President while the latter was speaking. Once he said he never heard what Mr. Roosevelt was saying. He peered intently at the crowd, watching individual faces and their reactions. He knew when Mr. Roosevelt had scored before the thunder of applause started—or before the votes were cast.

Mr. Roosevelt has made careful plans for this trip. He has thought about it for a month. He deliberately has refrained from scheduling a number of speeches until he knows whether they will be successful—for in addition to ascertaining public sentiment himself, he must remember that there are more than a score of newspaper correspondents aboard his train as intent on gauging public opinion as he is. A good show must be put on for their benefit.

So Cheyenne, Wyo., has been selected as a place at which to test the strategy of this trip. Wyoming is the home of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, one of foremost opponents of the President's court plan. Why Wyoming was picked and not Nebraska, the State of Senator Edward R. Burke, an even more bitter opponent, is not clear. Anyway, the Presidential train will skirt through Nebraska during the night. The schedule has been arranged that way. It could have been otherwise.

Wyoming may have been selected because the New Deal high command feels more intensely about Senator O'Mahoney's recalcitrancy than it does that of Senator Burke. The latter's opposition was expected. Senator O'Mahoney's opposition was not, and it came like a stinging blow.

The New Dealers regarded Senator O'Mahoney as one of their own. He had been First Assistant Postmaster General, next in command to Jim Farley, before he went to the Senate. The inner Administration circle takes the credit for Senator O'Mahoney being in the Senate. They claim credit for whatever he is today and they regard him as an ingrate and a traitor. Senator Joseph Guffey in the speech he made as Congress was adjourning expresses exactly the inner New Deal feelings toward Senator O'Mahoney.

And yet the Wyoming Senator opposed the President only on the court issue. He voted for all other New Deal measures. Without a word he voted to confirm Hugo L. Black as a Supreme Court justice. But his sin in helping to thwart the President in his major desire apparently is too grievous to be forgiven.

It is not known what Mr. Roosevelt will say at Cheyenne. But his stop and informal address there will give him an opportunity to size up the feelings of the people of a State where an outstanding opponent of his court plan lives. If he finds those people sympathetic to him and hostile to Senator O'Mahoney, he may be encouraged to become bolder in what he says and he may be persuaded to extend the list of stops and talks he will make on the remainder of the trip.

U.S. Nazis Flock To Join Militia, Dickstein Says

Obtain Required Military Training in That Way, He Charges.

Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, said yesterday that German aliens and German-Americans are joining the State militia in this country to obtain military training required by the Hitler government.

He told reporters at least 2,000 have joined the New York State militia and that he has called the matter to the attention of the State attorney general. There have been enrollments also in the Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin and California militia, Dickstein added.

The Representative, who has been seeking a Congressional investigation of "un-American activities and propaganda," said military training also is being provided in 24 camps by the German-American bund.

Germany requires, he explained, that all males must have a year or two of military training. Fritz Kuhn, leader of the bund, the New Yorker said, got Chancellor Adolf Hitler to amend government orders so that Germans drilling at camps in this country could be credited with military service.

Many fine type Germans who do not wish to come into the open with their training because of loyalty to the United States are joining State militias, Dickstein said, to forestall reprisals.

He asserted, too, that he had obtained information that an auxiliary of the bund was being organized to train women.

Sen. Borah Asks Strict Neutrality In Far East Clash

Pocatello, Idaho, Sept. 22 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah insisted today on complete American neutrality in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war and asserted President Roosevelt is making every effort to keep this country out of the Asiatic conflict.

Borah, who has represented Idaho in the United States Senate 31 consecutive years, predicted in an interview with newspaper men as his train sped him homeward through eastern Idaho, that the Oriental warfare will be prolonged.

Borah said he would like to see the next Congress devote itself exclusively to economic problems.

Jersey Court Upholds Flag Salute Statute

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 22 (AP).—Without expressing a view on "the wisdom of the statute," the court of errors and appeals upheld unanimously today the 5-year-old law requiring public school students to salute and pledge allegiance to the United States flag.

Appeal from the action of the Secaucus board of education in expelling two children in 1935 for refusing to salute the flag was taken on the ground that the law was unconstitutional.

President Returns Pen to Ellender, Boasts of Honesty

Houma, La., Sept. 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt wrote Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, that the Senator took a "tremendous risk" in lending him a platinum fountain pen to sign the sugar bill.

President Roosevelt signed the bill and returned the instrument to Ellender with a letter which read:

"Dear Allen: I hope you appreciate the tremendous risk you ran when you confided your fountain pen to my tender care. On that particular day, as you know, the signing of the bill hung in the balance. If I had withhheld my signature I would have kept the pen. I used it, however, in signing the bill and am sending it back to you with the hope that you will always remember my unusual honesty."

Jersey G. O. P. Factions Unite To Fight Moore

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 22.—New Jersey Republicans, widely split as they picked the Rev. Lester H. Clee to seek succession to his bitter political foe, Harold G. Hoffman, as Governor, moved swiftly today toward State consolidation for a fight to thwart United States Senator A. Harry Moore in a bid for a record-smashing third term as Democratic Governor.

Clee, 49, Newark Presbyterian clergyman, who entered politics three years ago in a "clean government" reform move, rolled up a 60,865 majority over his Hoffman-indorsed opponent in the New Jersey primary.

Clifford R. Powell, 16 years a legislator and Clee's fellow State Senator, conceded defeat early today and immediately dispatched a congratulatory message to Clee, pledging November general election support.

Powell's olive branch offering was immeediately followed by one from Hoffman, who during the campaign had called Clee a "pussyfooter" in politics.

Hoffman wired Clee "All possible co-operation" in the November 2 contest with Moore, 58, who in an unopposed primary yesterday was given a vote of confidence approaching 300,000, well over Clee's battle-swelled total. There also will be several independents in the race for the Governorship.

Teacher's Wife Divorced.

Boston, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—The wife of Economics Instructor John B. Crane, of Harvard University, today was granted a divorce in Probate Court after testifying that her husband had once hurled a prickly cactus plant at her while she was bending over.

Circuit Judges Confer Today On Court Plan

Will Report on Need for Additions; Cummings, Reed to Be Present.

Charged with making recommendations bearing indirectly on lower court aspects of the President's court plan, the annual judicial conference of senior Circuit Court justices will open here today in cloistered quiet.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme Court will preside. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, principal author of the court bill, and Solicitor General Stanley Reed will be present.

Conferences, usually extending over three days, will be in closed session. Later a report dealing with the state of court dockets and the need of additional judges will be made by the Circuit Court jurists over Chief Justice Hughes' signature.

Court Controversy Angle.

Significance is attached to the meeting in view of the Senate Judiciary Committee's request "the Attorney General, in collaboration with the judicial conference, shall . . . make a survey of conditions in the various districts and circuits and shall report to Congress at its next session recommendations for the creation of such additional district judgeships and circuit judgeships as the Attorney General and the judicial conference may deem advisable and necessary."

It will be the first conference of its kind since October, 1936—four months before the President sent his court message to Congress, proposing up to 50 additional judges in the lower courts, one for every Federal judge six months past 70.

Recommendations of the conference for additional judges in the past have been based on need and congestion of dockets, rather than age. The judicial age issue raised by the President was pigeonholed by Congress with the court bill, and the modified bill finally passed provided no additional judges.

Delicate Position.

Instead, the Senate Judiciary Committee in its report opposed blanket appointment of judges, and favored individual appointments, based on need, thus placing the judicial conference in the delicate position of passing on at least part of the subject matter in the President's court bill.

Some of the senior circuit justices already have gone on record informally against the President's scheme of a mobile force of roving justices. Several months ago Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, canvassed the views of senior judges in all the Federal Districts.

Out of 72 replies, 14 judges said they needed additional judges in their districts on a permanent basis, 53 reported additional judges were not needed in their districts, and five gave noncommittal answers.

A survey by The Post in February showed 34 Federal judicial districts had dockets in arrears, but in only four of these were there judges over 70 who would be given additional judicial aid under the President's plan.

Senate, House Surveys.

At the Justice Department yesterday it was said no significance could be attached to Attorney General Cummings attending this year's judicial conference, since it always has been customary for him and his aids to attend in the past.

Meantime, it was learned members of both Senate and House Judiciary Committees are making a first-hand study of conditions in the various circuits.

A special Senate sub-committee has been assigned to the task by Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, and Chairman Hatton Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, is working in co-operation.

Soviet Sentences 9 As Farm Wreckers

Moscow, Sept. 22 (AP).—Eight officials were sentenced to death today by a court which convicted them of attempting to create discontent within the Soviet regime by ruining collective farming.

Their offenses allegedly occurred in the Lotoshin region of Moscow Province and were undertaken in hope of restoring capitalism. The condemned officials were described as closely connected with Fascist agents.

A local official of the Kassansay district in middle Asia was sentenced to be shot, and four others were sent to prison.

New SEC Head Aims to 'Revitalize Capitalistic System'

Douglas Wants A Free Market, He Tells Press

Youthful Chairman Says He's 'Pretty Conservative Sort of Fellow.'

Under the chairmanship of William O. Douglas, the Securities and Exchange Commission, serving as "the investors' advocate," will seek to maintain a free market, watching carefully for possible new schemes for manipulation and vigorously prosecuting in every case detected, while aiming at "revitalizing the capitalistic system on a conservative basis."

The new chairman, youthful Yale professor on leave, who was elevated Tuesday to succeed James M. Landis, told reporters at a press conference that he is "a pretty conservative sort of fellow from the old school." He said he was of a school "too old to be remembered, perhaps," which declares for "conservative standards of finance, without monkey business," and believes "simple honesty should prevail."

Answers Own Questions.

Because of a "great deal of uncertainty in business and finance" what to expect of him, the chairman met news men to answer three questions which he framed as:

"1. What is the proper role of the SEC, in relation to finance and investment?

"2. What kind of a bird am I?

"3. What is my own attitude toward a number of specific live problems we have before us?"

"No one can save a fool from his folly," he said, and the commission cannot guarantee prices or give investment advice. However, the members do not believe that "two or three hands should be dealt to each of the insiders while the stockholder gets only one, if he even gets that."

Points he raised were:

In response to critics of the length of prospectuses, it is likely that whenever possible the length will be cut, and the "intelligibility" increased.

Silent On Margins.

A new, simpler, consolidated form is in prospect that will make it easier for issurers to do business under the securities act.

Of margins he said he never talked to anyone except the Federal Reserve Board and never tells anyone what he has told the board.

The SEC is "fast moving into position to do a real job" of detecting manipulation, with "a minimum of inconvenience to innocent houses and innocent investors," he declared.

There is no disposition on the part of the commission to have Congress change section 16 of the exchange act, covering trading by insiders in securities.

The real study of segregation of broker-dealer functions is yet to be made, and there is as yet no program or policy on the subject.

Seeks Roots of Trend.

From time to time the SEC hopes to get at the root of market trends, whether natural or artificial, but will not be interested in prices as such. It will not interfere with price changes in a free market, but will not permit others to interfere, either.

Swifter movement was forecast looking to regulation in the over-the-counter market similar to that in the exchange field.

Rules on market operations of underwriters and others during the period of distribution of securities are "definitely on their way," but no rules will be passed wittingly which will permit manipulation.

The investment trust study is nearing completion and reports will be ready for Congress by January 1.

Action His Motto.

Confidence that the Lea, Barkley and Chandler bills to revamp corporate reorganization procedure will be passed at the next session of Congress was expressed.

The immediate future "must be a period of action, action based not upon economic predilections of men on the commission but as required by requirements of the investors and called for under the law."

Hurricane in Tropics Heading for Bermuda

A "tropical disturbance of hurricane intensity," centered around a spot 800 miles northeast of San Juan and 1,500 miles southeast of Bermuda, was reported here yesterday by the Weather Bureau.

Weather Bureau experts said that the hurricane may reach Bermuda within a week, if it does not blow itself out by them, but will not reach the North American coast line. The storm, they said, is traveling slowly in a northwest direction.

Suit to Prevent Business Levy CollectionFiled

Tax Called Unconstitutional by Head of Advertising Agency.

Alleging that the District's new buisness license and gross receipts tax, which was expected to raise $3,000,000 was unconstitutional, Howard W. Berry, trading as the Howard W. Berry Advertising Agency, yesterday filed in District Court a suit to stop attempts of District officials to enforce collection of the impost.

District officials said the tax was aimed at approximately 20,000 persons and firms and had been designed to bring in sufficient money to enable the city to make up its $46,000,000 budget and remain "in the black." Its adoption originally caused certain groups of business men to threaten to take their firms out of the city into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

In his suit, which was filed by Attorneys Richard L. Tedrow and William Cogger, Berry said that in 1936 he was engaged in the advertising business with Ralph Spangler, who on January 5, 1937, took over the entire plant, which had been operated as a partnership. He claimed to be uncertain as to who would owe the tax, which is retroactive, and he added he could not pay "said tax" in which event, it was contended, the Commissioners "have the authority to prevent him from engaging in business, thus depriving him of his property without due process of law."

Berry said he was engaged in the advertising business, which he claimed was "interstate commerce" and was not therefore subject to local taxation schemes. The tax will cost him a flat $10 and two-fifths of 1 per cent of the gross income back to January 1, 1936. Another challenge of the tax was the assertion there was no provision in it which enabled one unjustly taxed to secure return of the unlawful tax money paid in, while if there were a refusal or a failure to pay the tax criminal prosecution might ensue.

Since he left the partnership with Spangler, Berry stated, he had formed his own agency. Now he does not know whether he or his former partner, or both, will have to pay the tax levied for 1936.

Seven points raised by Berry's attorneys in their motion for an injunction to restrain collection of the tax were: That advertising is interstate commerce; that the tax imposes a burden on interstate commerce and is invalid for that reason; that there should be a hearing to determine the legality and extent of a tax before it can become a fixed charge; that he was uncertain as to which of the partners should pay the tax; that he was unable to pay it; that he had no remedy other than by suit in equity; that he would be irreparably injured if enforcement of the tax were permitted.

Legion Selects Los Angeles as ConventionCity

California to Be '38 Host; 2 Lawyers Lead Race for Commander.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 22.—The American Legion, its fifes and drums now silent, its marching and its pageantry over, selected Los Angeles today as next year's convention city and fell to serious discussions to determine who will be its next national commander.

For this honor—for the job of succeeding Harry Colmery of Kansas—two lawyer-Irishmen were out in front, Daniel Doherty, of Boston, and Ray Kelly, Detroit's corporation counsel.

Three others were in the race, Lynn U. Stambuagh, of Fargo, N. D.; Milo J. Warner, of Toledo, Ohio, and Stephen F. Chadwick, of Seattle.

In the fight for next year's convention, Chicago and Denver put up urgent claims, but subsequently withdrew. The Californians had insisted all along the Legionnaires had a date there in '38.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke to urge a closer relationship between his organization and the legion; called on it for continued official neutrality in labor conflicts, and denounced communism and fascism.

Secretary of War Harry Woodring spoke of an international scene that was "clouded," but in this scene, he said, the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull were "pursuing a direct and logical course and are doing everything humanly possible to prevent the spread of the contagion of war."

Among resolutions passed was one asking a Congressional amendment to extend beyond the age of 21 if necessary the four-year school and college compensation granted to sons and daughters of dead veterans.

As the convention neared an end, it was announced that 1,284 Legionnaires will sail tomorrow for France, where they will be entertained by the French government. About 900 left today.

D.C. Policeman 1 of 3 Accused Of Food Thefts

Denies Stealing From St. Elizabeths; Implicated in 2 Confessions.

A District policeman and two St. Elizabeth Hospital employes were charged with larceny from the United States Government yesterday in connection with the theft of about $100 worth of foodstuffs from the hospital commissary.

The policeman, Private Willie Jim Mathews, 38, of the First Precinct, was charged after being questioned for several hours by detectives. He denied knowledge of the thefts.

The other men, John Erwin Robey, 29, of 2217 Chester street southeast, and Thad Parker Strader, 32, of 3211 Sixth street southeast, both confessed to the larcenies and in signed affidavits submitted to Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson implicated Mathews.

The three men were seized by a squad of detectives led by Lieut. Clement P. Cox at Robey's home early yesterday. A quantity of canned food was found in the man's home, police said.

In the statements submitted to police, Strader and Robey said they had been taking materials for personal use from the hospital over a period of about six months.

Both Robey and Mathews, Inspector Thompson said, have ill wives and apparently have been in financial straits for some time.

Mathews was suspended from duty when the charge was lodged against him. The men were released on $300 bond each for hearing in Police Court this morning.

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—A blast in a building being torn down today slightly injured six persons, including a city supreme bench judge, and called out fire engines on two alarms to put out a small blaze that followed.

Judge Abner Sayler was talking to a fruit vendor when the blast occurred.

Abattoir to Cost D. C. $105,000, Ickes Asserts

Annual Loss Would Come From Added Sewage Disposal Burden.

District officials indicated yesterday they still see no way of preventing Adolf Goebel, Inc., from building and operating an abattoir at Benning after Secretary Ickes had announced that the District will stand to lose up to $105,000 annually from it.

In a letter to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Ickes said his sewage-disposal engineers had figured that disposal of sewage from the plant would cost $55,000 annually—figuring the slaughterhouse in operation at half capacity. He added that taxes from the plant would bring the District only about $5,000.

After reference to the District's distraught fiscal condition, Ickes concluded: "It seems to me that the children of the District schools could benefit from such a sum ($50,000) with more profit to the community than could the pigs on a sticking rail in a slaughterhouse."

District officials read wtih sympathy the Secretary's concluding paragraph in which he referred to the Collins bill, introduced last session, which provides for sewage taxation on the basis of use of sewer facilities.

"I have been informed by the engineers who made this study," Ickes' letter read, "that if the proposed slaughter house should operate at half of its capacity, the sewage from this plant alone would entail an annual operating cost to the District of approximately $55,000 at the new disposal plant. . . .

"I think it is only fair," the letter concluded, "that the people of the District of Columbia should realize what is in store for them in the way of footing a bill to care for sewage disposal for a slaughter house corporation."

Britain May Resurrect Nine-Power Treaty to Save China

Signers of 1922 Would Gather To Survey War

Washington Pact Assures Nation's Territorial Integrity.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 22.—A British spokesman indicated tonight Great Britain was weighing resurrection of the Washington nine-power treaty guaranteeing China's territorial integrity in a drastic effort to end the Sino-Japanese conflict.

The British idea, the spokesman said, would be to propose conference of the signatories of the 1922 pact, all of which have special interests in the Far East. The United States would be invited as one of the signers.

They would formulate if possible a positive and united program bringing to a halt Japan's undeclared war against China. Both Japan and China signed the nine-power pact.

Authoritative quarters said the conference, if called, would conduct its business outside the machinery of the League of Nations.

Such a course would facilitate the presence of the United States, not a member of the League, and of Japan and Italy, at odds with the League.

It was not made clear how far Great Britain would seek to have the conferring powers go to bring a close to the Far Eastern undeclared war.

Japanese Bombs Kill 200 in Nanking

great heights as the Japanese tried to keep above the heavy fire of the Chinese anti-aircraft batteries.

Cowering among the dead in the Nsiakwan slum quarter were still hundreds of helpless refugees, apparently too frightened to join the rush from the city, which went on all day and far into the night, by motor car, ricksha, wheelbarrow—any means of travel available.

19 Americans in City.

Tonight thousands were encamped on the countryside around this city, believing it inevitable the Japanese air armada would strike again.

Nineteen Americans, seven of them women, remained in Nanking during the Japanese attacks, in peril from both the bombs and the curtain of antiaircraft fire sent up by the Chinese batteries emplaced all about Nanking.

So far as could be learned, no foreigners were harmed in the raids and foreign property escaped serious damage. But this was not because Japanese bombs did not fall on those sections chiefly inhabited by foreigners. Aside from the slum district near the river, the area where most bombs fell was the new residential quarter, where the American, German and Italian embassies and The Netherlands Legation are situated.

Shell Falls in U. S. Grounds.

One antiaircraft shell fell in the American Embassy compound and fragments were imbedded in the gatehouse. A bomb struck near the Italian Embassy and the embassy staff, which had returned from a gunboat on the river shortly before the raid, was badly shaken, although no one was injured.

Before Ambassador Johnson's return the United States embassy was in charge of J. Hall Paxton, second secretary, who had remained at his own request. During the raids he took charge of the Americans concentrated there, shepherding them into the embassy dugout when the Japanese approached. This bomb-proof shelter within the embassy compound is its only defense against air attacks.

Before the Japanese attacked, a number of British resident departed for upriver and a number of American businessmen took refuge aboard river vessels.

Chinese Resistance Firm.

The Japanese failed to demoralize the Chinese government by bombardment of the capital. In spite of a conviction the raids would be renewed tomorrow, officials were more firmly determined than ever that the government should continue to function here.

In spite of the general exodus there has been no panic, and Nanking's police and other public services continued to operate.

An hour after the raids were over workmen were filling holes in the streets and electricians were repairing damaged light and telephone lines.

New Shanghai Advance.

Shanghai (Thursday), Sept. 23 (AP).—Artillery thundered along the front northwest of Shanghai early today and Japanese officers said their forces had begun a new westward thrust from Lotien, 15 miles from this city.

Chinese said the attacks had been repulsed, and neutral authorities believed the Japanese were awaiting reinforcements before undertaking further major operations.

In Shanghai itself doctors and nurses worked desperately to check a peril that has become greater for those within the city than the Chinese-Japanese hostilities, a cholera plague which grows ominously day by day.

The epidemic, considered the worst in Shanghai's history, was increased by 100 more cases in the last 24 hours in the International Settlement and French Concession alone, bringing the known total for the areas to 1,500.

Britain Accepts Partial Apology From Nippon

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 22.—Britain tonight wrote off her diplomatic ledgers her friction with Japan over the wounding of the British Ambassador to China, although Tokyo had made only partial settlement of the accecunt as originally presented.

The foreign office informed the Tokyo government it had received "with satisfaction" Japan's final note on the affair and regarded "the incident as closed."

Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull, Britain's envoy to Nanking, was gravely wounded August 26 while motoring from Hanking to Shanghai. Britain, charging Japanese aviators with the attack, protested vigorously to Japan, demanding an apology, punishment for those responsible and guarantees against further attacks.

Japan first returned an "interim reply," meeting none of these demands. The final reply, handed to Sir Robert L. Craiger, British Ambassador to Japan, by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota yesterday, made only partial compliance.

The full apology was not forthcoming, although Japan formally expressed "'deep regret," and the demand for punishment only ilicited assurances "suitable steps" would be taken.

Nevertheless Craigie, on Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's instructions, returned to Hirota a note which declared: "I have received instructions from his Majesty's government to state that they have received your communication with satisfaction and regard the incident as closed."

Diplomats considered Britain's action as a climb-down from Eden's original protest. But foreign office circles admitted relief the affair was liquidated even on such terms.

The Japanese assurance that "instructions have been sent again to Japanese forces in China to exercise the greatest care in safeguarding noncombatants" was accepted as reply to Britain's demand for guarantees against a recurrence.

Filene, Ill in Paris, Put In a Pneumonia Tent

Paris, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, who is ill with pneumonia in the American Hospital here, was placed in a pneumonia tent today.

"He is doing as well as possible," said his physician, Dr. Edmond L. Gros. Dr. Gros said Filene's condition was grave and that a crisis might be expected next Sunday.

Mobile Troops Speed Conquest In North China

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Sept. 22.—The Japanese army's conquest of a buffer corridor between China and Soviet-protected outer Mongolia proceeded rapidly today as mechanized Japanese columns pushed into Suiyuan province from two directions.

Japanese dispatches said one column, composed of veterans of Japan's army of occupation in Manchuria, entered northeastern Suiyuan from conquered Chahar and seized the important walled town of Hincho. The other, advancing along the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway from Tatung, in Shansi Province, has occupied Fengchen and important passes through the Great Wall.

Chinese forces under Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, Governor of Suiyuan Province, which have occupied western Chahar since last winter, have been driven well back into Suiyuan. The Japanese advance from Shansi is believed to have cut off Gen. Fu's avenue of escape to the south.

Hull Denounces Bomb Attacks As 'Inhuman'

U. S. Envoy Returns to Nanking, Says He Fled Without Orders.

commenting that "experience has shown that, when and where aerial bombing operations are engaged in, no amount of solicitude on the part of the authorities responsible therefor is effective toward insuring the safety of any persons or any property" within the bombing area.

Reports of bombings by Japanese planes to date, it added, indicate such operations "almost invariably result in extensive destruction of noncombatant life and nonmilitary establishments."

It declared further "the American Government strongly objects to the creation of a situation in consequence of which the American Ambassador and other agencies of this Government are confronted with the alternative of abandoning their establishments or being exposed to grave hazards."

Ambassador Johnson's report on his evacuation of the embassy at Nanking bore out repeated statements by Secretary Hull that the ambassador had exercised his own authority, granted by the department, to take what steps might appear necessary to safeguard the embassy personnel.

Kept Contact With Capital.

At the same time it stressed the fact that the Ambassador has at no time been out of contact with the Chinese government. It was said at the department that the Luzon has been anchored off the bund "within 20 minutes' ride by motor car of the embassy premises." In addition, J. Hall Paxton, second secretary, has remained at the embassy and the Ambassador has been in touch with him by telephone at all times from the river front, "10 minutes' ride from the ship."

Peace Groups Warn Roosevelt.

Last night Yakichiro Suma, counselor of the Japanese Embassy, reported Japan "has no intention of bombing civilian and noncombatant portions of Nanking."

At the same time six peace organizations which have been calling for invocation of the American neutrality act issued a statement saying:

"If the President continues after the bombing of Nanking to claim there is no war, his failure to apply the act must be accepted as deliberate defiance of the will of the national legislature and of the people."

Secretary Hull said yesterday he was keeping President Roosevelt fully informed of all developments in the Far East, and that he would be able to communicate with the President's train throughout the Chief Executive's Western trip.

Italy has indicated she will fall in line concerning the Nyon accord of nine powers for erasing mysterious attacks on shipping from the Mediterranean, but informed observers were afraid the Italian leader would not let matters rest at that.

From Italy came reports of moves to send more "volunteers" to Spain. British and French officials were understood to be studying plans to counter such a move, with the French anxious to open the Franco-Spanish frontier. How far the British would back such a stand would provide the first big test of the new Anglo-French "alliance," authoritative persons said.

Mussolini was believed to be hopeful of persuading Hitler to approve increased troop shipments to Spain at the meeting of the dictators this week-end.

Western High Will Honor Two Traffic Victims

Forming of Safety League in Schools Will Follow Assembly Tribute.

That two classmates, killed early this month in an automobile crash, may not have died in vain, Western High School students and alumni will stage a memorial tribute this morning which they hope will be the beginning of a city-wide student movement to promote safety on the highways.

The tribute is for James Leech and Elmer Hays, both members of the class of 1936, who were killed outside of Washington September 3, when the car, also occupied by Hays' parents, collided with a bus.

A group of the boys' friends will conduct the 9 a. m. assembly, the first of the school year, at Western this morning. A tribute to the victims will be paid in an address by Allan Brown, a University of Maryland student who graduated from Western in 1935. Dr. Elmer S. Newton, school principal, also will talk.

But the real memorial, members of the arrangements committee said last night, will be the league designed to band Washington's 90,000 public school children to eliminate highway accidents. Attending the service this morning will be representatives from all of Washington's high schools. After the program they will take part in a conference to organize the league.

Subsequently organizations in each school will be formed to map educational and other programs to aid boys and girls to become familiar with traffic problems and teach them how to be safe drivers.

William Bernton is chairman of the committee making preliminary plans for the safety league. Other members include John Shipe, secretary, and Regan Fuller, Porter Davis, Robert Krone, William Calnan, James Lanigan and Marion Doyle. All are Western alumni who graduated in the class with Leech and Hays.

Just before commencement, Leech was voted the senior "most likely to succeed." Leech and Hays were roommates at Dartmouth. They were en route there to begin studies of their sophomore year when the tragic accident occurred.

Cement Industry Denies Intention to Fix Prices

By the Associated Press.

The cement industry denied yesterday Federal Trade Commission charges of a Nation-wide price-fixing conspiracy.

The Cement Institute and its manufacturing members, who prouce virtually all the Portland cement in the country, asserted each plant determines its own prices and said similarity of prices was due to competition in the sale of a standardized product. The institute said no system was used to equalize freight differentials, as had been alleged.

D.C. Fliers Want To Teach, Not Fight for China

Spurn Offer of Passage to Hongkong; Recruiting Ring Revealed Here.

Details of a systematic attempt to recruit American pilots for duty in China were revealed last night as several Washington fliers who had been considering enlisting backed down after being promised nothing more than transportation to Hongkong.

"Local agents have already arranged for my ticket to Hongkong," one pilot of long experience said, "but when I pressed them about details of what I would do in China and about pay when I got there, they were vague."

The flier said the agents, a Washington lawyer and a Chinese professional man, claimed the Americans would instruct natives in war combat.

The Department of Justice last night refused to comment on reports it was investigating recruiting activities here. The State Department reported it was doing everything possible to discourage travel to China.

"As far as we know," a spokesman said, "the department has granted no passports to citizens wishing to travel in the Sino-Japanese war area."

State Department officials were silent on the question of legality of agents of a foreign government arranging for transportation of persons to that country, providing no recruiting was done in the United States. At the Department of Justice it was asserted each case requires a different interpretation.

It is known that at least five Washington pilots have been approached and that local agents have been in communication also with airmen in Richmond and other nearby cities.

Trio Refused Bond In Denhardt Case

Shelbyville, Ky., Sept. 22 (AP).—The Garr brothers, accused of murdering Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, indicted as the slayer of their sister, were denied bond by County Judge H. F. Walters here late today, at least until their examining trial Friday.

The three, Jack, Roy and Dr. E. S. Garr, have been in jail here since Monday night, when they surrendered after the former lieutenant governor and former adjutant general had been shot to death on the eve of his second trial for murder of his fiancee, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor.

Text of United States Protest

Text of the United States' note protesting the Japanese plan to bomb Nanking from the air was made public by the State Department today in the following announcement:

"Upon instructions of the Secretary of State the American Ambassador at Tokyo, Mr. Joseph C. Grew, delivered a note to the minister for foreign affairs at Tokyo today. The note read textually as follows:

The American Government refers to the statement by the commander in chief of the Japanese 3d fleet which was handed to the American Consul General at Shanghai on September 19 announcing the prospect of the Japanese naval air force, after 12 o'clock noon of September 21, 1937, to resort to bombing and other measures of offense in and around the city of Nanking, and warning the officials and nationals of third powers living there to take adequate measures for voluntary moving into areas of greater safety.

Objects to Jeopardy.

The American Government objects both to such jeopardizing of the lives of its nationals and of noncombatants generally and to the suggestion that its officials and nationals now residing in and around Nanking should withdraw from the areas in which they are lawfully carrying on their legimate activities.

Immediately upon being informed of the announcement under reference, the American Government gave instruction to the American Ambassador at Tokyo to express to the Japanese government this Government's concern; and that instruction was carried out. On the same day, the concern of this Government was expressed by the Acting Secretary of State to the Japanese Ambassador in Washington.

This Government holds the view that any general bombing of an extensive area wherein there resides a large populace engaged in peaceful pursuits is unwarranted and contrary to principles of law and of humanity. Moreover, in the present instance, the period allowed for withdrawal is inadequate, and in the view of the wide area over which Japanese bombing operations have prevailed, there can be no assurance that even in areas to which American nationals and noncombatants might withdraw they would be secure.

"Solicitude" Ineffective.

Notwithstanding the reiterated assurance that "the safety of the lives and property of nationals of friendly powers will be taken into full consideration during the projected offensive," this Government is considered to observe that experience has shown that, when and where aerial bombing operations are engaged in, no amount of solicitude on the part of the authorities responsible therefore is effective toward insuring the safety of any persons or any property within the area of such operations.

Reports of bombing operations by Japanese planes at and around Nanking both before and since the issuance of the announcement under reference indicate that these operations almost invariably result in extensive destruction of noncombatant life and nonmilitary establishments.

In view of the fact that Nanking is the seat of government in China and that there the American Ambassador and other agencies of the American Government carry on their essential functions, the American Government strongly objects to the creation of a situation in consequence of which the American Ambassador and other agencies of this Government are confronted with the alternative of abandoning their establishments or being exposed to grave hazards.

Repeated Guarantees Cited.

In the light of the assurances repeatedly given by the Japanese government that the objectives of Japanese military operations are limited to Chinese military agencies and establishments and that the Japanese government has no intention of making nonmilitary property and noncombatants the direct objects of attack, and of the Japanese government's expression of its desire to respect the embassies, warships and merchant vessels of the powers at Nanking, the American Government cannot believe that the intimation that the whole Nanking area may be subjected to bombing operations represents the considered intent of the Japanese government.

The American Government, therefore, reserving all rights on its own behalf and on behalf of American nationals in respect to damages which might result from Japanese military operations in the Nanking area, expresses the earnest hope that further bombing in and around the city of Nanking will be avoided.

U. S. Revenue Shows Gain of 169 Millions

ber, 48, into a steel safety zone post. Both her legs and arms were broken and she suffered a possible skull fracture.

The automobile, travelling 50 to 60 miles an hour, narrowly missed two street cars. Two detectives who gave chase lost the car in traffic.

"You could hear the rubber squealing on all four tires," said the detectives' chauffeur. "The doors of the car they had were swinging wide open. You could see their arms go out trying to catch the swinging doors."

The men back-tracked to the city's East Side, where the automobile plunged into a safety zone stanchion. The fugitives seized a sedan and turned into a side street where they jumped from the machine.

The driver disappeared into a nearby yard before the officers arrived. The screams of two small girls attracted attention of the police, who surrounded the yard. Slapik, who had gone into the children's play tent, surrendered without a struggle as two-score police converged on the tent. His right hand was crudely bandaged. His thumb had been struck by a bullet which pierced the get-away sedan.

The other three fugitives are still at large.

Slapik was returned to jail. He had been awaiting grand jury action on first-degree murder charges in the killing of Lawrence Krall, special policeman.

Charles Bird escaped in Missouri in July, 1936, while serving ten years for robbery and auto theft. Frank Bird and Widmer, serving life for murder, escaped the next month.

Following the capture of the Birds and Widmer here in July, the Government announced it would seek the death penalty if it convicted them as members of a gang which abducted youth in fleeing from an $18,000 robbery here last February. The trio was captured following a Cleveland Heights bank robbery in which part of the loot was recovered. In all, police estimated their haul in a series of bank fobberies at nearly $50,000.

Tax Unit Exempts Railroad Pensions

The Internal Revenue Bureau ruled yesterday pensions paid by the Railroad Retirement Board are exempt from Federal income tax.

The bureau cited a provision of the rail retirement act that ptnsions are not subject "to any tax, garnishment, attachment or other legal process."

In the ruling, the bureau held that railroads which challenged the 1935 rail retirement act in the courts can not receive tax deductions for funds set aside under provisions of the law.

The bureau also decided today that free lunches a corporation gives its employes are "wages."

Commands Warship

CAPT. ERNEST D. McWHORTER.

Plane Carrier Will Be Put on Duty Thursday

The new aircraft carrier Yorktown will be placed in commission next Thursday by Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, U. S. N., it was announced yesterday. Acceptance of the floating landing field by the Navy Department has been delayed because the Yorktown's July trial runs showed her reduction gears to be unsatisfactory.

The defective machinery, naval officials said, will be replaced by the ship's builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.

The first commander of the 20,000-ton aircraft carrier will be Capt. Ernest D. McWhorter, U. S. N. The crew for the new ship is now being assembled at the Norfolk Navy Yard, officials said, and her plane squadrons have been trained at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va.

The Yorktown and her sister ship, the U. S. S. Enterprise, now under construction by the same builders, were authorized by the national industrial recovery act of 1933, when funds were made available for such work.

The communications officer of the Yorktown will be Lieut. Comdr. H. C. Behner, U. S. N., who makes his home here.

Capt. McWhorter has been connected with the Yorktown since October, 1936. He previously had served as commander of the fleet air base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone. During the World War he was on duty as commander of various submarine divisions, and was awarded the Navy Cross for his services.

Schools Report Slump Despite Late Arrivals

1,253 Enrollment Decline From 1936; Peak Due in Three Weeks.

School statisticians said reports coming in after Tuesday's classes placed the number of applicants for school membership at 87,481—1,263 fewer pupils than had entered classes on the corresponding day a year ago.

Decreases in the elementary grades offset gains in the junior and senior high schools and in the teachers' colleges. Wilson and Miner teachers' colleges have 98 more students than they had on the second day last year. Senior high schools have reported gains totaling 133 and junior high schools 324. But in the elementary schools decreases as for Tuesday totaled 1,750, and in the vocational schools there are 56 fewer pupils than a year ago.

There were more than 5,000 more pupils in school Tuesday than there were on the opening day, Monday, and school officials expect the enrollment to climb daily for two or three weeks. Peak enrollment is usually reached around November 1.

Both Monday and Tuesday were Jewish holidays, which kept large numbers of school boys and girls away from classes.

One case of doubling up classes because of excessive enrollment was reported at Shepherd School. Pupils have been placed on morning and afternoon shifts.

Schools Report Larger Budgets Throughout U. S.

Educators yesterday predicted enriched opportunities for the 30,700,000 boys, girls and adults expected to enroll in the public and and private schools this month.

At the office of education, officials estimated increases in school budgets reported from the 48 states will be reflected in slightly greater teaching staffs, more school materials and smaller burdens for teachers.

Also credited with brightening the back-to-school picture were school building construction by the PWA, additional Federal appropriations for occupational training under the new George-Deen act and continued student-aid through the National Youth Administration.

There probably will be little change in the total enrollment, statisticians said.

They predicted a continued, rapid decrease in elementary school population, due to the falling birth rate, and an increase in high school student bodies.

Houses in Rome Fired By Electrical Storm

Rome, Sept. 23 (Wednesday) (AP).—One of the heaviest electrical storms in years blew roofs from several houses and started a number of fires in Rome last night and early today.

Several fire companies rushed to Ostia, 13 miles southwest of here near the mouth of the Tiber River, where a waterspout and fires caused much damage.

Collins, unrelated to the man he slew, was hunted down last July 3.

Author Tells of Soviet Drive To Capture Wealth in Arctic

MR. AND MRS. HENRY P. SMOLKA.

Heavy Machinery Clicking, Hothouse Vegetables Growing Under Ice as Government Provides Billion Dollar 'Grubstake' for Development.

The prospectors in the old days used to tell of the mythical wealth of Siberia.

"The greatest gold fields in the world!" they would exclaim. "Some day we will go back and reap that harvest."

But they never went back. And now there is no place for the old prospector though the big stampede is under way. For Prof. Otto Schmidt now runs the show, with a billion dollar "grubstake" from the Soviet government. The Soviets are like that. And gold is just a minor item in the wealth these Socialist pioneers of the Arctic are now reaping for their people among the ice caps of the far-flung Arctic Circle.

Vegetables Grow in Arctic.

The snowy veil lifted as he spoke, instead of the popular picture of barren wastes and nomadic tribes, the scene he painted was one of gigantic endeavor and throbbing engines.

Green vegetables growing in hothouses under the snow. Hens fed in artificial sunlight. Socialist cities rising at latitude 74 to the staccato pounding of drills. New sea routes over the dome of the world—the Northwest Passage long dreamed of—bringing comfort and safety, safety against the imperialist designs of Japan . . .

You can read all this and much more in Smolka's fascinating book of travels: "40,000 Against the Arctic," which already has been acclaimed.

"The principle applied in the campaign to "raise the Arctic natives" is to get it done as far as possible by the natives themselves," Smolka said yesterday.

Form Nomadic Soviets.

"They are asked to form nomadic soviets, a form of government which is presented to them as being only a short step forward from their own tribal councils. The resistance of their shamans, their medicine-men, is broken by young Communists, who expose them to ridicule. They do it by giving them a taste of their own medicine. As soon as the tribes find out that doctors and veterinary surgeons can drive away the evil spirits that have crept into the bodies of men and reindeer, just as effectively as the shaman, they give their confidence to the new doctor. And soon they believe what the Red missionaries tell them: that the shaman is a parasite who thrives on their ignorance and superstition."

Smolka, who arrived with his wife in New York three weeks ago, will travel cross country soon to Los Angeles and later write a book about America.

"What do you think of it?" he was asked.

"It's a little early to answer that," he said. "And yet one cannot help feel that Walt Whitman's dream will be realized. The old America has passed, the unthinking America of yesteryear. In its place is a socially-minded country and the dawn of Whitman's American ideal."

New Business Tax Returns Lagging

Returns on the new business privilege tax are coming in slowly with the deadline only ten days off, Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen said yesterday.

Out of an anticipated 25,000 or 30,000 taxpayers, only 900 have filed returns, he said. Only 500 licenses have been issued.

Unless the business privilege tax returns are filed at the District Building before October 1 the taxpayer is subject to a 10 per cent flat penalty plus interest charges. Licenses must be obtained by October 15.

Classes Begin As G. W. Opens Its 117th Year

Freshmen Are Welcomed by President Marvin at Assembly.

Entering upon its 117th academic year, George Washington University yesterday opened classes in all colleges and divisions and welcomed freshmen at a special assembly in Corcoran Hall.

"You are a select company," President Cloyd H. Marvin told the first-year students, "and we expect you to do here the best work of which you are capable." President Marvin referred to special responsibilities imposed upon the university by its situation in the National Capital and the fact that more graduates from George Washington enter the Federal Government than from any other institution in the country.

Other assembly speakers were William C. Johnstone, jr., dean of the Junior College; Mrs. Vinnie G. Barrows, director of women's personnel guidance; DeWitt Bennett, chairman of the committee on student life, and Wayne Kniffin, president of the Sophomore Club.

In a separate convocation, freshman medical students were welcomed by President Marvin and Dean Earl B. McKinley, recently returned from eight months spent in travel and research.

Enrollment for public school teachers in the education course will be held open through Saturday, Provost William Carl Ruediger announced yesterday.

Roosevelt Paralysis Statement

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The text of President Roosevelt's statement announcing the formation of a new foundation to unify the fight against infantile paralysis follows:

I have been very much concerned over the epidemics of infantile paralysis which have been prevalent in many cities in different parts of the country. I have had reports from many areas in which this disease is again spreading its destruction.

And once again there is brought forcibly to my mind the constantly increasing accumulation of ruined lives—which must continue unless this disease can be brought under control and its after effects properly treated.

My own personal experience in the work that we have been doing at the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation for over 10 years leads me to the very definite conclusion that the best results in attempting to eradicate this disease cannot be secured by approaching the problem through any single one of its aspects, whether that be preventive studies in the laboratory, emergency work during epidemics, or after treatment.

To Unify Fight.

For over ten years at the foundation at Warm Springs, Georgia, we have devoted our effort almost entirely to the study of improved treatment of the after effects of the illness. During these years other agencies, which have from time to time assisted, have devoted their energies to other phases of the fight.

I firmly believe that the time has now arrived when the whole attack on this plague should be led and directed, though not controlled, by one national body, and it is for this purpose that a new national foundation for infantile paralysis is being created.

As I have said, the general purpose of the new foundation will be to lead, direct, and unify the fight on every phase of this sickness. It will make every effort to insure that every responsible research agency in this country is adequately financed to carry on investigations into the cause of infantile paralysis and the methods by which it may be prevented.

Early Diagnosis Stressed.

It will endeavor to eliminate much of the needless after-effect of this disease—wreckage caused by the failure to make early and accurate diagnosis of its presence.

We all know that improper care during the acute stage of the disease, and the use of antiquated treatment, or downright neglect of any treatment, are the cause of thousands of crippled, twisted, powerless bodies now. Much can be done along these lines right now.

The new foundation will carry on a broad-gaged educational campaign, prepared under expert medical supervision, and this will be placed within the reach of the doctors and the hospitals of the country.

The practicing physician is in reality the front-line fighter of the sickness, and there is much existing valuable knowledge that should be disseminated to him.

And then there is also the tremendous problem as to what is to be done with those hundreds of thousands already ruined by the after-effects of this affliction. To investigate, to study, to develop every medical possibility of enabling those so afflicted to become economically independent in their local communities will be one of the chief aims of the new foundation.

Those who today are fortunate in being in full possession of their muscular power naturally do not understand what it means to a human being paralyzed by this disease to have that powerlessness lifted even to a small degree.

It means the difference between a human being dependent on others, and an individual who can be wholly independent. The public has little conception of the patience and expense necessary to accomplish such results. But the results are of the utmost importance to the individual.

Others to Carry On.

The work of the new organization must start immediately. It cannot be delayed. Its activities will include among many others those of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, of which I have been president since its inception. I shall continue as president of the foundation.

But in fairness to my official resopnsibilities, I cannot at this time take a very active part in the much broader work that will be carried out by the new foundation, and I therefore do not feel that I should now hold any official position in it.

However, because I am wholeheartedly in this cause, I have enlisted the sincere interest of several representatives and outstanding individuals who are willing to initiate and carry on the work of the new foundation. Its personnel will be announced as soon as it is completed.

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Declaring "taxation has become a bugaboo in corporate planning," the committee on Federal taxation of the American Institute of Accountants recommended today the creation of a "qualified nonpartisan commission to conduct the research required for the unbiased determination of fixed principles of Federal income taxation."

The Administration could do "nothing of greater importance to assure the future stability of business," the committee said in its report, copies of which were sent to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and other Government officials.

Troop E Cavalry To Entrain Today For St. Louis Show

Sixty cavalrymen and their horses, comprising the famous drill squad and mounted band of Troop E, Third Cavalry, will entrain this morning at the Baltimore & Ohio freight station for St. Louis, where they will take part in the National Horse Show.

A visitor from St. Louis who attended the annual Fort Myer pagent last year suggested to National Horse Show officials that the drill squad appear there this year. Mayor Bernard Dickmann of St. Louis requested permission from the War Department to import the team, and his request was approved.

The troop will put on the "Wild Mongol" act which proved so spectacular at last year's pageant.

Star Sleepless 66 Hours Stops 'Susan' Matinee

Gertrude Lawrence Misses Matinee Because of Eye Ailment.

Miss Gertrude Lawrence, English star of the comedy-drama "Susan and God," yesterday was treated for inflamed eyelids and ordered by doctors to take a temporary rest, while the National Theater management made refunds to a capacity matinee audience.

Edward Cook, manager of the troupe, said Miss Lawrence had gone 66 hours without sleep. She did not retire Monday night, he said, because of the death of Osgood Perkins, her leading man.

Perkins collapsed at the Willard Hotel an hour and a half after the first performance Monday night. He had opened "Susan and God," which its premiere here, against the advice of his wife, Janet.

Cook said Miss Lawrence would appear as usual in the nightly showings for the rest of the run, but added they may yet decide to drop the Saturday matinee performance.

Miss Lawrence portrays the part of a trouble-maker who has caught a new glimpse of God. Shallow and impulsive, she attempts to spread sweetness and light among her companions through the medium of a frank public confession of all their weaknesses of the flesh.

True to the unwritten law of the theater, the management found another player to fill Perkins' part. The place was taken by Paul McGrath, an understudy, who appeared previously as a minor figure in the comedy and whose romance was upset by Susan's (Miss Lawrence) specious philosophy.

The New SEC Chairman.

William O. Douglas, elected unanimously by his colleagues to succeed James M. Landis as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, has been a member of that body for nearly two years. He has been attached to the SEC staff, however, since 1934, when he was engaged to direct an investigation of protective committees. Since then a series of studies dealing with problems of bankruptcy and corporate reorganization have enhanced the reputation which he had already gained as an authority in this field.

Mr. Douglas' technical qualifications for the responsible position to which he has been advanced are excellent. He is a member of the New York bar and still holds the Sterling professorship of law at Yale University, being absent on extended leave. He has written numerous articles on corporate finance and management. He has also served as special adviser in bankruptcy investigations.

There is nothing in the official record of the new SEC chairman to warrant apprehension that the progressive yet cautious policies of his predecessors will be abandoned. In a public announcement yesterday Mr. Douglas, on the contrary, took pains to indicate that they will be continued.

He disavows any intention of trying to foist his own ideas upon a Government regulatory agency, asserting that he desires to keep strictly within the plain meaning of the statute. Direct and aggressive prosecution of abuses is promised, but the chief aim of the commission is to establish a free market in which the investor will be expected to exercise his own judgment. This rational, well-balanced summary of objectives should do much to allay fears that there is any likelihood of changes in policy which cannot be justified as wholly within the law as well as in the public interest.

The presidents of the New York Stock and Curb Exchanges have both expressed gratification over the choice of Mr. Douglas, and both significantly stress the fact that he possesses the knowledge and experience essential to an understanding of the regulatory problems that confront the SEC.

Of course Mr. Douglas' fitness as an administrator will eventually be gauged by the way in which he applies his knowledge to the extremely difficult tasks of controlling investment and speculative activities. It is a most responsible post, calling for a high degree of technical knowledge combined with intelligence and good judgment. This combination of qualifications, which Mr. Douglas seems to possess, is of itself insurance that administration of the law will be effected in a sober and responsible manner.

Waning Patience.

The oral representations made on legal and humanitarian grounds to Japan by the United States and other nations against the bombardment of Nanking failed to have any noticeable effect. The aerial attack was carried through just the same.

But this intolerable action is leading to an overdue stiffening in the attitude of the civilized nations. The United States, for its part, has followed its unsuccessful verbal plea to Tokyo with a written note which demands acknowledgement. And by this Japan has been formally placed on notice that she will be held responsible for any damage suffered by Americans as a result of Japanese military operations in the vicinity of the Chinese capital, or elsewhere

This is more like it. From the long-time point of view no good was ever served by running away from a dangerous situation, such as Ambassador Johnson's temporary withdrawal from Nanking suggested that this Nation was prepared to do. It is of no advantage to escape today's frying pan only to fall into tomorrow's fire. And this fact, happily, the Administration is now giving strong evidence of realizing. If the note to Japan has any meaning at all it means that we are not prepared to stand by with folded hands while Japan not only makes a shambles out of China and of international law, but recklessly destroys our own interests as well.

The Japanese who have been jubilant about America's recent ignoble role in the Far East may discover that they are a little premature in reading us out of court. The United States cannot yet be regarded as a cipher in the affairs of nations. If slow of action, as a result of divided counsels and an entirely laudable desire to keep out of war, America is not yet ready to adopt a policy of scuttle and run.

The Hull note to Japan may only be the first stage in our return to an awareness of hard realities. But at least it promises to be the end of that wobbly uncertainty which, during recent days, has tended to characterize our Far Eastern policy. For we cannot any longer be indifferent to what is going on on the mainland of Asia, nor can we safely ignore the fact that this is but the latest in a long line of wanton aggressions which, unless summarily stopped, will continue until they definitely imperil our own security.

Plenty To Discuss.

The discussions now in progress between Secretary Morgenthau and Sir Frederick Phillips, permanent Undersecretary of the British Exchequer, are properly veiled in secrecy. However, there are a number of problems of varying degrees of urgency that will obviously call for attention in the course of the conversations.

First and probably foremost is the question of the future of the tripartite monetary agreement concluded last fall with Great Britain and France. The recent sharp decline in the franc is evidence that the French stabilization fund has ceased to be effective. Certainly it has not kept the franc from sliding to a presumably permanent lower level. While the French Finance Minister, Georges Bonnet, asserts that his government intends to remain a party to the monetary pact, and protect the franc against "bear" raids, he makes an important reservation. That is a promise not to trench upon gold resources considered essential for national defense.

In view of the unsettled political outlook in Europe, it is unlikely that France would be willing to part with much more gold to prevent a further decline in the franc. Consequently that country must now be regarded as an unreliable partner in the monetary agreement. Regardless of the excellence of French intentions, the United States and Great Britain will perforce be compelled to shoulder most, if not all, the responsibility for maintaining the monetary accord.

Apart from stabilization problems, Mr. Morgenthau and Sir Frederick are doubtless concerning themselves with the methods to be pursued in dealing with the heavy gold inflow into their respective countries. Recurring rumors that the United States might feel forced to take positive action to check such shipments are perturbing to the British. Allegations that the British exchange account has added to our troubles by recently releasing considerable amounts of gold for sale are also heard. The character of the comment shows that both countries are worried by the necessity of acquiring large amounts of gold through their respective stabilization funds and that each is anxious not to assume an undue share of the joint burden.

No doubt the British are also concerned over the outlook for continued sterilization of gold shipped to the United States, and the possibility of a change in the buying price of gold. The recent decision to release $300,000,000 from the inactive gold fund will not of itself affect exchange relationships. Nevertheless, it is a partial reversal of the sterilization policy and as such might be taken to foreshadow impending changes in control methods.

The British likewise have a decided interest in our silver-buying policy, while our Treasury is reported to be interested in obtaining some international support for silver after expiration of the London agreement at the end of this year. Last but not least, the conferees may wish to use the opportunity of quiet discussions to further negotiation of the pending Anglo-American trade pact, on which much of the spade work has now been done.

All the topics mentioned have a direct bearing upon exchange relationships and are properly matters of deep concern to officials responsible for the conduct of monetary policies. With an automatically functioning gold standard superseded by managed currencies, and with exchange stability now maintained through the operations of government stabilization funds, it is obvious that frequent and direct contacts between the responsible American and British officials are essential. The French crisis merely adds to the importance of such problems, making a close working agreement between the United States and Great Britain the more imperative.

End Of The PWA.

The active existence of the Public Works Administration was to have been terminated at the end of the last fiscal year. But Congress yielded to demands for an extension of its life on the ground that so-called moral obligations had been incurred by tentative promises of aid to certain hard-pressed communities.

In some cases bond issues had been authorized, or even floated, on the strength of such promises. Furthermore, aid for the construction of new schools was said to be much needed. Although the revolving fund of the PWA had been tied up by an executive order requiring Federal grants to be used to hire relief labor, it was assumed that the order would be rescinded and the released funds used in full along with a limited supplemental appropriation to take care of new projects.

President Roosevelt's announcement that the PWA has now made its last allotment disappoints these expectations and has already brought an angry protest from Representative Beiter. He asserts that the sudden suspension of operations violates an informal understanding given by the White House that disappointed communities would be cared for.

However that may be, the President's decision, judged solely on its merits, is wise. With the emergence from depression the pump-priming activities of the PWA are no longer required. Furthermore, the so-called moral obligation incurred by its promises of aid is not so great as the obligation to cut out unnecessary expenditures and bring the budget more nearly into balance.

There is no place for the PWA as a permanent agency, either for planning or financing public works. The President has entrusted the work of planning governmental projects to the National Resources Committee—a body much better equipped to carry on this activity. With the improved financial status of the cities, moreover, there is no reason why the Government should help to finance non-Federal community projects. And the Federal public works program of a nonrelief nature will, of course, be executed by the regular departments of Government.

Despite handicaps imposed upon the PWA by reason of its character, and despite conflicts with the relief agencies, its record of accomplishment is surprisingly good. Although it provided a relatively limited amount of direct employment considering the size of its outlays, it afforded an indirect stimulus to the heavy industries of by no means negligible value. Furthermore, it aided the construction of useful community projects instead of merely making jobs for the idle, often without benefits of a tangible nature to the public at large.

It will be a final mark of merit for the PWA if it is liquidated without further delay, now that its usefulness is obviously a thing of the past. Even with the cessation of new work, it will take a long time to complete the inspection of still unfinished projects and to wind up its financial affairs.

Spain Leaves The Council.

Failure of the Spanish effort to secure re-election to the Council of the League of Nations is too easily interpreted as being primarily due to the activities of a bloc of Latin-American governments hostile to the Valencia regime. Other important factors were involved in the voting of the Assembly which this week gave the Spanish request for re-election 24 affirmative and 23 negative votes, thus falling 8 short of the requisite two-thirds majority.

While not a permanent member of the Council, Spain has held a seat on that body almost continuously since its first session in January, 1920. Earlier Spanish governments habitually took the lead in blocking efforts to secure a healthy rotation of the nonpermanent seats among the various nations represented in the League Assembly.

In 1926 Madrid even went so far as to give notice of withdrawal from the League merely because the granting of a permanent Council seat to Germany threatened to push her off that body. Submitting to this form of blackmail, the Assembly in 1928 re-elected Spain to the Council and she has been represented on it ever since.

The smaller democratic nations, particularly the Scandinavian powers, have deeply resented the way in which Spain and Poland have held on to what is ironically called "permanent nonpermanent" Council membership, in defiance of the principle of rotation. This year a healthy precedent enabled them to defeat the Spanish candidacy.

In the early years of the League both Greece and China failed in efforts to secure re-election to the Council because, at the time of their candidacies, these countries were rent by revolution. There was emphasis on the absurdity of placing on a body as theoretically august as the Council the representative of a government unable to exert control even over its own territories. The same reasoning has now, very properly, assisted in the ousting of the Valencia government from a post to which it is no longer entitled by any criterion of fairness or reason.

It is doubtful, however, that Spain would have lost her seat even now had the Valencia regime been able to retain the support of the Latin-American states. Heretofore, for largely sentimental reasons, these countries have always worked to keep Spain on the Council. But most of them are now sympathetic with the insurgents and this sympathy has overbalanced their traditional cultural loyalty to Madrid.

Properly interpreted, however, the rebuff is not to be regarded as a serious setback for the Valencia regime. And it is noteworthy that the government is taking the incident calmly. There is no foolish talk of resigning from the League in protest. The Spanish delegation, very sensibly, says that the defeat will not affect its government's policy at Geneva. By this it wins more prestige than it has lost by the Assembly action.

Work Or Give Up Relief.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Illinois has a new law which embodies an idea that has occurred to many persons in connection with the administration of relief to the unemployed. This is the act, sponsored by Representative Calvin D. Johnson, of Belleville, and approved by Gov. Horner, which gives able-bodied men on State relief rolls the choice of working on streets and highways or foregoing their relief payments. The statute requires the overseers of the poor to submit a list of all employables on relief rolls to local highway authorities, who are authorized to provide repair and maintenance jobs for the persons so listed. Refusal to accept employment calls for the end of the dole.

If Illinois is wise it will make the most of this measure. Properly enforced, it will reduce the number of relief recipients and at the same time smooth out many a bumpy street and fill chuckholes along countless country roads. One of the commonest complaints has been that the taxpayers have footed the relief bill and received little or nothing in return. The Johnson law gives them something in Illinois.

Battle Cry For Republicans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Former President Hoover urges a national convention of Republicans. Affirmative leadership of this kind should be met in like spirit. Instead we have inexcusable sidestepping. Only out of the searching debate of a national convention can we Republicans fit ourselves, spiritually and intellectually to meet the New Deal. We have failed in this to date, because we have not yet met the challenge of the Michelson smear.

The New Deal was founded on the smear. It continues to harp on it. Out of the smear it has built its scarecrows and on the smear based its "emergencies." The smear was merely an attack on Mr. Hoover. It went to the very heart of the Republican record. Only after we have met this challenge, therefore, can we rededicate ourselves to Republican principles and refresh ourselves at the fountain of Republican history.

Democracies demand clean-cut issues. The New Deal is leading America to the treadmill of forced labor under the collective state. The place for the Republican Party is at the very opposite to such a program. Mr. Farley says the Republican Party is dead, but 17,000,000 voters in 1936 signed a vehement protest against such, a verdict, furnishing glorious evidence of vitality. In these 17,000,000 we find the bone and sinew of Republicanism. A political party with a record of achievement as great as that of the Republican Party never dies—unless it dies at the top. What we now need, therefore, is opportunity for debate—out of which will come a new grasp for principles and a vigorous fighting energy.

The mask has now been torn from the design behind the "objectives" of the New Deal. Issues are cleared, and a national convention is all important in giving Republicans the stimulation and insipiration needed in planning the struggle for the preservation of America.

It is time that the rank and file of the Republican Party expresses itself, and I hope this letter will stimulate other Republicans to write the editor of The Post giving their views.

BALLARD DUNN,

Aiding The Aggressor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may be that the words of our kindly Secretary of State in his latest address on peace brought satisfaction to the majority of our readers, but I could find in them nothing of real import at this crisis. Today's news of Japan's intent to blow Nanking off the map emphasizes their inadequacy. They could certainly bring little comfort to democracies whose lives as well as their pocketbooks are at the mercy of the three outlaw nations.

From the moment our Government refused to distinguish even in diplomatic intercourse between agressor and victim, preaching to our people a safety first doctrine as if it were virtuous, we ceased to have any claim to real greatness. We are acting in a way wholly unworthy of our Founding Fathers, however much we may acclaim them in pamphlet, sermon, and speech. Our praise of democracy is a mockery when, in our power, we take no step to defend any democracy but our own.

For at least three years all well-informed persons have foreseen the role Germany, Italy and Japan were preparing to play; to the Japanese our fellow citizens, with the acquiescence of our Government, have provided funds and the very planes which enable them to slaughter freely. We must share the shame and the blame of that slaughter, compared with which scalping by redskins was innocent child's play; as we must share also the guilt of what is happening in Spain. Repentence, not complacency, is needed to save us and our children from the degrading effects of our nonmoral attitude in these testing times.

HARRIET BOYD HAWES,
Chevy Chase, Md., Sept. 20.

In Praise Of Huey Long.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Big Bill" Skeels, who has a reputation on Capitol Hill as being a clearer thinker than some of the men occupying legislative seats, quotes these words from Huey P. Long in his book on the Frazier-Lemke farm debt moratorium act:

"When it takes six hours to get a bill from one end of the Capitol over here that is relieving the farmer and half a minute to get a bill over yonder and approved at the same time that affects the bankers, I want to find out what the difference is, because my folks back home are waiting for me to explain to them why it is that we can give bankruptcy to a railroad and cannot give it to a farmer; why it is that we can give bankruptcy to a city and cannot give it to a farmer. . . ."

Under the amended Frazier-Lemke law which was held constitutional after a long delay in the Supreme Court, a farmer is able to get to some extent the consideration that was always given a railroad, a city, or any big corporation. Three years in which to square up debts and climb out of a financial abyss is an enormous help to a man sunk as deeply as millions of farmers have been. I am one of those who are profoundly glad that the Frazier-Lemke law is a reality.

It is not surprising that Skeels is enthusiastic about this statute, for, as a North Dakotan from the region where farm mortages were as plentiful as grasshoppers, he knows what a menace they have been. His enthusiasm is understandable. Nobody but a farmer or the son of a farmer—and that is what I am—can appreciate the tragic position of a tiller of the soil threatened with loss of his portion of earth.

It is no secret that Huey Long contributed much toward the enactment of this excellent law. In so doing, he rendered an inestimable service. American farmers should be grateful all over the country, and "Bill" Skeels has a right to use adjectives of eulogy.

E. H. GRIFFITH,
Washington, Sept. 18.

In The Next War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Government of the United States has always suspended the Bill of Rights in time of war in order to quell the radicals who deem it treacherous to support capitalistic wars. We all recall the ignominious incarceration of the valiant Eugene Debs. The next war will find the true disciples of Debs aiding and abetting neither side, notwithstanding the fact that Soviet Russia will very likely be a participant. The swashbuckling, supermodernized, pecksniffian, professional radicals will no doubt beat tin cans, wave flags, and foam at the mouth. The playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" will stand the hair on their heads like the bristles on an angry dog's back.

To the same extent that the World War made the world safe for democracy the next war will save the world from fascism—poor consolation. The next war will be a ghastly and sanguinary experience for genuine, unadulterated radicals. On the one hand they will be flayed and lacerated by the avaricious and truculent disciples of the old order; on the other hand they will be spurned and execrated by zealous, patriotic "radicals."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on your cartoon "Reform of the Judiciary." The stark simplicity of the drawing carries its message to everyone and what a message!

HERMAN GIFFORD.
Millbrook, N. Y., Sept. 17.

Our Animal Friends.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is indeed gratifying to note the fine work that is being done by Washington newspapers in finding homes for homeless, stray animals and new homes for animal pets who, through no fault of their own, must find new masters. This is most praiseworthy and shows the high degree to which civilization has advanced when it offers such splendid protection to the most helpless of its beings—the stray dog and cat.

In the savage state, the immature, untrained mind thinks only of how it can take advantage of a creature weaker than itself—the strong prey on the weak—but as we advance further in civilization, the strong offer protection to the weak, rejoicing in the thought of being able to do so, and taking an indulgent, kind, and protective attitude toward a creature weaker and less able to face conditions than he is.

And what could be more appealing than the dear, homeless dog or cat waiting patiently for someone to adopt him? Finding him a home is doing him the most possible good and is rendering him the least kind of assistance, as we all know that animals are very domestic and home-loving and suffer emotionally in strange, unfamiliar surroundings.

There is at present a bill before the Congress of the United States intended to protect animals from misuse and abuse in medical laboratories. There is nothing new or unusual about a bill of this kind, as England long ago made a law defending the rights of animals in this respect. We realize it sometimes takes a long time for a reform to go through as all progress is uphill work. This bill is receiving splendid co-operation from residents of the District of Columbia, who are giving wholehearted assent to this humane measure, and it is sincerely hoped that every resident of the District will lend his support to this long-needed reform.

MILLIE R. INGRAM.
Washington, Sept. 18.

What We Vote For.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So much is said nowadays by individuals about what the American people want and expect when they go to the polls that a common-sense view of the extent of their expectations is needed. Speaking as a voter of many years I would say that the rank and file of the voters neither expect nor desire any particular change in Government they have been accustomed to, but they want it ably administered.

Nor does the ordinary voter ever suppose that he is voting an indorsement of the candidate's political, theological or social opinions outside the party's platform.

If my neighbor, the alderman, has served ably and helped lead his town in difficult times, I vote for him again without laying too much stress on his personal opinions which I know can never go into effect in our form of town government. And I may compliment a national leader by my vote with mental reservations regarding some of his irrelevant theories. I would no more feel that I was indorsing all of them than that by the ballot I was called upon to indorse his note.

My attempted explanation of common sense distinctions which are common with almost everyone voting but which few may consider worth while to formulate or comment on may seem to many like something which one ought to take for granted without making any ado about. However, it does seem important to me to know in some clear way just what the American people can really be convicted of by persons here and there who charge them with all kinds of intentions when they presumably only come to the polls to vote in the ordinary common-sense way that they have always known about.

ARTHUR RICHMOND.
Washington, Sept. 18.

The Post Impressionist

Sweet Leilani.

ONE of the more intriguing things about being a newspaperman is the interesting protographers you meet. One of my favorites is Mr. Randolph Burrus, of The Post staff, who asked my advice yesterday on a matter which I am unable to answer, but which readers of The Post may be able to help him with.

He has decided to do his basement over. Being an imaginative young man he wants to convert it into some kind of a Hawaiian bower, but he can't think where to find palm trees, leis, hula skirts, etc., with which to while away the long winter nights that will soon be upon him.

"Ever since I was a kid," he confided, "I wanted to have some kind of room in the house that was different, with a kind of foreign atmosphere y'know. I thought about Spanish, but you can't put grillwork and loose plaster and all that stuff in very easy.

"So I was looking at this wooden post in the middle of my basement and suddenly I thought it would make a good tree if it had some branches and leaves on it. It's a square post, but you could fit it up so's it'd be round. Then I got to thinking what kind of a tree, and then the idea hit me—a palm tree. After that the whole thing came to me. Boy!——

"——Can't you just see the snow flying and blizzardy next winter, 'long in December y'know, and me and my wife sitting in Hawaii in the basement with palm trees, and we could have some people in and serve them some kind of special Hawaiian drink. I know one. I learned it down at Virginia Beach. Hardly anybody knows it. It's made of pineapple juice, orange juice, some lemon, grenadine, ice, maraschino cherries, and some good old rye. Boy! Is that a drink. Kind of an old-fashioned, but with seltzer. I'm going to name it the Waikiki Wallop—Hawaiian, y'get it?

"But I don't know what kind of a bar to put in. I wonder what a Hawaiian bar looks like. I been up to the Library of Congress and all around, but I can't get a thing on Hawaiian bars. I heard there was some Hawaiian in New York. Think I'll go up there and look em over next week. I think I'll do that.

"I got the drinking glasses all figured out. They'll be coconut shells. How's that for an original idea? Something different. Everybody has the same old thing. Lot of chromium and red leather and painted glasses, but my place is going to be different. I never heard of anybody with this Hawaiian bar in the basement idea before, did you?

"Another thing will be the music When the people come downstairs the music will be playing some nice sweet Hawaiian song, "Sweet Leilani," or something, and we'll keep up the Hawaiian music for a while, just to get 'em in the right atmosphere, and then we'll switch over to some hot stuff. But that'll be later. Boy, oh boy, that'll be swell, won't it, on a nice cold winter night, to step into Hawaii? Kind of a surprise.

"But, damn it, I can't get any palm trees, and I don't know what a real Hawaiian bar looks like, so I'm kind of stalled. I could get some coconuts and hang them from the ceiling, but you really ought to have more than that to give the right picture. Say! The Coconut Grove closed up this summer, didn't it? Maybe I could get a palm tree from them cheap.

"Guess I'll go down and find out. Probably they'd have some cardboard palm trees to fasten against the walls. That would help. I could get a bar built pretty cheap out of bamboo. That would be just the thing. I wish I knew where to get some bamboo. And some coconuts.

"Another thing I got in mind is a canvas swimming pool, like they have on the decks of these ocean boats in the summertime, y'know. I'm going to get one of those put in the basement. Say, are we going to have fun this winter!—The waves of Waikiki swishing in the background and nice soft music and a few Waikiki Wallops—and haye they got a wallop!—Man, oh man!"

If any reader of The Post can help Mr. Burrus obtain the necessary stage props for his little dream world, I would be much obliged if they would write him care of the paper. Incidentally, I understand Mr. Charles Del Vecchio, a protographic colleague of Mr. Burrus, is planning on installing an Alpine winter resort with tobogganing, skiing and other fashionable sports, on the roof of his house. If you have any old toboggans, send them in. EUGENE WARNER.

Calendars Are Deceivers

Merchants who fancy they are pleasing their customers by hiring only beautiful young girls or fair young Apollos as salespersons appear to be making a mistake Charles F. Stech, New York, market and sales analyst, says they are losing money. Surveys in large city stores, reports Mr. Stech, show that as their years increase salespeople gain in efficiency, and that those in their fifties have the best records.

If these surveys will serve to correct the cruel rule of some proprietors against employing individuals over 40 years of age, they will accomplish double good. In every walk of daily experience it is to be expected that wisdom, judgment, and capability increase with riper years and larger lessons.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Senatorial Courtesy.

IF THIS THING means what I think it means, I hope I misunderstand it.

I refer to the proposition that when any member of the United States Senate is nominated for a place on the Supreme Court, Senatorial courtesy requires that he shall be confirmed without a struggle on the ground that he couldn't be a Senator if there were anything wrong with him. This would be an assumption of virtue and fitness in violent disagreement with much past experience of the body which is sometimes called, but invariably with a smile, the most exclusive gentlemen's club in the world.

It would far exceed the degree of confidence expressed by the electorate whose verdict in many cases is merely that the people's choice is the least offensive of a bad lot, but never that he is perfect.

By and large, the reputation of the Senate is distinctly better than that of the Chicago City Council, for example, and the boys may take such pride as they like in the fact that their composite police record compares favorably with that of any other body of similar age and size, if it does.

* * * *

THEY TOOK FIRM steps, as the saying goes, a couple of years ago, with an elderly employe of the Senate who made a few dollars by writing a magazine piece in which he tossed off the ambiguous compliment that there were fewer crooks in the Senate than one might suppose.

It was difficult to arrive at this suppositional figure, and, anyway, the remark was so phrased that in dissenting from it the elder statesmen had to be careful lest they seem to argue that there were more crooks, not fewer. They got around it, however, and their honor and dignity were vindicated by their own verdict, but they still failed to convince the country that membership in the Senate was conclusive proof of honesty, much less wisdom.

The Senate is what it is, and we all know just about what it is, which is another way of saying that we know it contains a large proportion of graduate county prosecutors and big-time machine politicians.

Some of its members are appointed by Governors belonging to a very low order of political life, and there have been such appointees, in addition to certain elected members, whom no courtesy, however generous, could clothe with an appearance of decent conscience, dignity or principle.

Yet the theory advanced in the discussion tardily aroused by the confirmation of Hugo Black would hold that anyone holding down a seat in the Senate is above rejection or even serious inspection on grounds of courtesy alone.

* * * *

THAT IS CARRYING nice manners to an extreme the folly of which has been demonstrated in the confirmation of a liberalizing force who now is rather widely understood to have belonged once, if he does not still belong, to an organization of night-riding terrorists.

Members who voted for Mr. Justice Black have now admitted that they did so on second-hand assurance that he did not belong to the Ku Klux Klan and that they would have turned him down had they known that he did belong. But they did not violate Senatorial courtesy to the extent of putting the question to him, preferring, instead, to rely on his own appreciation of that courtesy by which they set so much store themselves.

Any man not a member of the club, however, would have been required to answer direct questions, and the Department of Justice, which also waived its normal duty in an extension of the Senatorial courtesy toward Mr. Justice Black, would have combed its record from his kindergarten days to make sure that he never canned a dog, whispered in class or dumped over a little edifice on Hallowe'en.

All this begins to mean that henceforth, if the Senate still insists on the same rule of courtesy that gave Senator Black a base on balls, it will be against the public interest to select a Supreme Court Justice from the United States Senate.

Perhaps, looking around their membership and remembering some of the things that they know about each other but never mention, they will now change the rule to preclude regrettable impositions on their mutual politeness. Courtesy between members of the club is all right within limits, but there comes a point where it amounts to something much worse than mere discourtesy to the country.

First Doctor—I don't see how a man like you could get into such terrible shape from any one accident.

Tammany (wearily)—It wasn't any one accident; it was a series.

First Doctor—How long have you felt like this?

Tammany—I NEVER felt like this before in my life.

First Doctor—What were your first symptoms?

Tammany—Loss of weight in all boroughs. I had difficulty seeing far ahead and frequent dizzy spells.

Second Doctor—Did you consult a physician?

Tammany—They said they were physicians, but they must have been horse doctors.

* * * *

First Doctor—How do you sleep?

Tammany—I don't sleep well at all lately.

Third Doctor—Do you see terrible things in your dreams?

Tammany—Yes, and the elluvit is I ain't sure I'm dreaming!

Tammany—I can't tell.

First Doctor—Why not?

Tammany—It's so long since I had anything to do.

Second Doctor—Are you careful of your diet?

Tammany—I can eat anything but fruit.

Second Doctor—Why not fruit?

Tammany—I ate some berries once and I've been sick ever since.

Third Doctor—What kind of berries?

Tammany—Sea berries.

* * * *

First Doctor—Do you catch cold easily?

First Doctor—Is your heart all right?

Tammany—It always seemed the best heart in the country until the New Deal came along and made all other hearts seem like mustard seeds.

First Doctor—Wha you need is a long rest.

Judicial Review

By James Quarles.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

IT IS passing strange to read in the address broadcast by the President on the eve of Constitution Day these words:

"Contrary to the belief of many Americans, the Constitution says nothing about any powers of the court to declare legislation unconstitutional; . . ."

This is a reiteration of what New Deal speakers have asserted time and again. It is true only in the narrowest and most liberal sense—incidentally a singularly inappropriate interpretive attitude for one who is arguing for a very broad and liberal construction of the Constitution.

It is a fact that there is not to be found in the Constitution any provision which reads, "The Supreme Court shall have power to hold void any legislation which it deems in conflict with this Constitution," but the Constitution does, however, contain two specific provisions from which the inference is inescapable that it was the very definite intention thereby to vest in the courts the power mentioned. They are:

First. "This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land . . ." Art. VI, second paragraph.)

Court's Powers Implicit In U. S. Constitution.

THE PHRASE, "in pursuance thereof," obviously is one of controlling force. The dictionaries define "pursuance" as "a following after or following out," and "pursuant" as "done in accordance with; conformable."

The provision plainly implies that laws might be passed, and probably would be passed, by Congress and signed by the President which were not "in pursuance of" or "in accordance with" the Constitution, and the intention is clearly indicated that such enactments should not be the supreme, or any, law of the land.

Who was to determine whether an enactment was "made in pursuance" of the Constitution? Surely not the body which had passed it or the President who had approved and signed it, since such a plan would run counter to the commonsense principle expressed in the legal maxim, "No one should be judge in his own cause." This in addition to the check and balance fundamentals of our form of government. Nor was the vitally important matter just left in the air by the framers of the Constitution. Far from it, as shown by the second of the provisions referred to:

"The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." (Art. III, section 1.)

"The judicial power"—that is a very broad and comprehensive phrase. It covers every matter and question of a judicial, as distinguished from a legislative or executive character; for evidently it was intended by the framers to distribute all the powers of the Federal Government among the three branches. Moveover, the question whether a legislative enactment is constitutional is, as I trust will appear quite plain from what follows, a judicial question; and hence is to be determined in the final instance by the branch to which is assigned the judicial power.

Noted Cases Cited By Way Of Proof.

THE SUPREME Court does not pass upon mere abstract, academic or moot questions of law, nor does it invalidate legislation by the exercise of any "veto" power. It has no such jurisdiction, and is most careful to avoid assuming any such. The question of constitutional validity may relate to an act of Congress or of a State Legislature, or to an ordinance of a city council, or to the order of an administrative body; but the way, and the only way, it ever reaches the Supreme Court for its decision is in a lawsuit between two or more litigants, or in a criminal proceeding. For example:

In the first case in which the Supreme Court held definitely that the exercise of its jurisdiction necessarily required it to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation where such a question was involved—the notable one of Marbury vs. Madison, decided in 1803—the controversy was over a commission as justice of the peace in the District of Columbia.

Marbury sought to have the court by its order require Madison, as Secretary of State, to deliver to him the instrument, alleging that it had been duly signed by the President, but that Madison was wrongfully withholding it.

So likewise in the recent Schechter case, which involved the validity of the national industrial recovery act. There the Schechter company sought relief from a fine imposed, or about to be imposed, for not complying with the live poultry code. The power to impose the fine depended upon the legal validity of the code, and that, in turn, upon the constitutionality of the act which purported to authorize the President to approve or prescribe a code regulating the industry. The act was held unconstitutional by the unanimous vote of the justices.

In the AAA case the receivers of the Hoosac Mills challenged the right of the Government to levy upon them the processing tax prescribed by the agricultural adjustment act, and the question turned upon whether that act was or was not in conflict with the Constitution.

Judicial Review Upheld By Marshall.

THE COGENCY of the reasoning of Chief Justice Marshall in Marbury v. Madison appears in the following brief excerpts from the opinion:

"Certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the Nation, and, consequently, the theory of every such government must be, that an act of the Legislature, repugnant to the Constitution, is void . . .

"If an act of the Legislature, repugnant to the Constitution, is void, does it, notwithstanding its invalidity, bind the courts, and oblige them to give it effect? . . .

"It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is. Those who apply the law to particular cases must of necessity expound and interpret that rule. If two laws conflict with each other, the courts must decide on the operation of each.

"So if a law be in opposition to the Constitution, if both the law and the Constitution apply to a particular case, so that the court must either decide that case conformably to the law, disregarding the Constitution, or conformably to the Constitution, disregarding the law, the court must determine which of these conflicting rules governs the case. This is of the very essence of judicial duty."

From the foregoing it would certainly seem that the conclusion, that the Supreme Court has the power and rests under the solemn duty of holding void any legislation which it finds to be in conflict with the Constitution, is a logical imperative.

Japan And The Neutrality Law.

THE RISING TIDE of American indignation over Japan's undeclared war in China is a phenomenon which not even the most purblind advocates of the neutrality law are able to ignore. So they, too, have begun to climb on the bandwagon. The law must be applied, they now argue, because the present policy of the Administration is too pro-Japanese. It can only be made less so by applying the act.

This, at least, is the argument advanced by Stephen Raushenbush, former chief investigator for the Senate Munitions Committee, in a radio address delivered Tuesday night. Said he:

Another bad result is that by ignoring the neutrality law, the Administration has gotten into a position where it is pro-Japanese. The Japanese blockade of China can cut China off from American arms and loans for these arms at any time . . . The Aidminstration's policy allows American arms and loans to get to Japan—where the blockade stops them from getting to China. The President's recent order doesn't change this situation. If the neutrality law would be applied it would cut Japan off from American arms and loans—and even up the situation by that much. I am sure the Administration does not want to stay in the hole it has gotten into—of going out of its way to adopt a policy which helps Japan. There was for awhile a mistaken impression abroad that the law might hurt China . . . Now it is clear that its application will do something to even the military situation.

* * * *

THIS, OF COURSE, is eyewash. Mr. Raushenbusch and the organizations for whom he speaks are not in the least interested in evening up the military situation. They are not interested in righting the balance between Japan, the aggressor, and China, the victim. Those who clamor for the application of the neutrality law recognize no difference between nations in one category and those in another. They see the world divided only between nations at peace and nations at war and with regard to the latter no distinctions should be made for any reasons.

They are, of course, entitled to their opinions. Mr. Raushenbusch, himself sees certain flaws in the neutrality act. He points out that we are and for some time have been selling increased quantities of copper, tinplate, scrap metal and other commodities to Japan.

He would have such exports restricted to "normal" proportions, whatever that may be. But certainly there isn't the slightest possibility that any such restrictions are likely to be voted now or in any conceivable future.

The American people are not willing to pay the price that must be paid for peace through isolation. In the meantime, despite Mr. Raushenbusch's allegations, it would make not the slightest pratical difference whether an embargo on arms and credits to Japan were imposed or not.

Japan's purchase of arms and munitions from the United States has been inconsiderable. In August the total amounted to less than $300,000, of which only a small fraction was for actual arms and munitions. Japan produces its own arms, munitions and implements of war. And its credit facilities in this country (apart from normal commercial credits which would not be affected by the application of the neutrality law anyway) have already been reduced to the vanishing point as a result of the war and the economic tensions in Japan arising from that war.

* * * *

MR. RAUSHENBUSCH recalls the experience of the World War. A little knowledge, as Pope said long ago, is a dangerous thing. But even a little knowledge is useful when not applied with misleading intent.

In 1914, 1915 and 1916 we have been told ad nauseum the "war boom" from which the United States profited by being in a position to sell goods to the Allies at fancy prices led directly to our participation in the war on the side of our customers and creditors. Mr. Raushenbusch argues that the present "neutrality boom" has its parallel dangers.

But if the World War parallel has any force the presumption must be that should the Sino-Japanese hostilities last long enough we shall ultimately get into that war on the side of Japan and against China. But he does not say so. On the contrary he argues that the danger is that we may get into the war on the side of China. Somehow the projection of the 1915 situation onto the screen of present-day events simply doesn't make sense.

* * * *

IT IS QUITE possible, of course, that the application of the neutrality law might, in the long run, work more to the disadvantage of Japan than to that of China.

Nobody can be sure of that. But even if the point could be proved up to the hilt that would be no argument whatever for applying the law. For the philosophy of the law is clear. It is that the United States is unconcerned with the effects of its trade and financial policies on belligerent nations even as we are unconcerned with the moral issues involved in their struggle. But to state that credo is to show its utter fallaciousness.

We are concerned, and desperately, in what is going on in the world. We have a stake and a very considerable one in the preservation of those moral standards toward which the world of nations and the world of men have been groping lo, these many centuries. We cannot stand by and with any measure of equanimity see international law destroyed and the law of the jungle made into the law of governments without doing untold harm to our own interests.

Nor is it simply a question of idealism. It is, on the contrary, primarily a question of self-interest. For we are in the world and of it. We cannot escape the circumstance of our inextricable involvement in world affairs. Nor can we safely escape the responsibilities of that position. Yet that is precisely what the neutrality law suggests we can do. It is wish-fulfilment made into a dogma; it is the expression of the blind will to escape in a world where no escape is possible. It is the fetish of infantile minds that seek to hide from the terrors of the night by sticking their quaking heads into a pillow. And, at that, the pillow is full of holes.

A First Novel

By William Lyon Phelps

'A Trojan Ending.'

This is the name of a new novel by Laura Riding, published by Random House, New York, in a volume worthy in beauty of type and paper of the nobility of the theme although unnecessarily heavy in poundage.

Laura Riding was born and brought up in the United States, and for the last dozen years has lived in England and in Spain. She has published many volumes of poems, none of which I have read, and now appears her first novel, dealing with the Trojan War.

* * * *

This is the most intellectual novel I have read this year, and I say this to encourage some of my readers and to warn others. Although a work of prose fiction, it is obviously written by a poet. The cadences of the style are musical; both the subject and treatment are equally romantic.

Here is more evidence to prove that the Trojan War, fought about 1200 B. C., and which started Greek poetry with two unapproachable masterpieces, is still germinal; still full of the stuff of inspiration. How extraordinary it is that the City of Troy, not so large as a modern railway station, should have by that remote war contributed more to literature than all other wars put together.

* * * *

This novel, "A Trojan Ending," is placed in the days of the Trojan War, and the familiar characters in Homer, both Greeks and Trojans, are the persons, while Cressida, so famous in mediaeval romances and in Chaucer, Shakespeare and Dryden, is here a major figure.

The narrative parts of this novel vary in interest; the characters are what appeal most strongly to me. But the significance of the book and the real purpose of the author are not clear to me. Perhaps they ought to be.

But what I feel sure of is that the book comes from a first-class mind.

Tom McCarthy

Roves Washington's 'Harlem,' In Search Of Something Different.

"MISTUH, why can't you write what you saw?" he said. There was no note of accusation in his tone. His voice was as soft as a weathered bell. Quietly, unashamedly, like a child, he was puzzled.

TOM McCARTHY.

"To write a story," I said, "you have to have an 'angle.' Night life in Washington's 'Harlem' is supposed to be something very different from night life in other sections of the city. To write about it, you must find its peculiar characteristic. You must find something odd and humorous. You must be able to describe it as 'wild and frenzied.'

"I did not find it quite like that," I said, "and, therefore, I have no 'angle' around which to build my story."

"Maybe," he said . . . and his voice was not accusing but merely full of wonderment, "maybe, you pay too much attention to this 'angle' that you talk about and not enough to what you saw." His name was William T. Jones. He was a Negro, and he drove a cab.

* * * *

I WENT UP to Washington's "Harlem" in the hope of getting a story. I wanted to get a story about "Harlem after midnight," but I found that it didn't fit into the frame of my preconceived ideas on the subject. I was leaving "Harlem" without a story, when I met the taxi driver.

I told him that I wanted to go to a certain place where, after midnight, the "truckeers" in interstate transport gather to fight sleep with coffee and to talk.

"That is a long ways from here," Jones said.

"Yes," I told him, "but if I can get a story out of it, it will be worth my time."

"Are you a newspaper writer?" Jones asked.

I told him that I was. I told him that I had gone into Washington's "Harlem" and had failed to find a story.

It was then he said, very quietly, "Mistuh, why can't you write just what you saw?"

"If I printed a story about the boy who stands in the 1800 block of Seventh street and peddles marihuana cigarettes, I would need other incidents like that to fill out my story," I said. "I could not simply say that a man called George comes up to the folks as they get out of their cars and says "Solid Man," which is the password of the dope peddlers. I could not tell that story and then fill in the rest of my column with a description of night life in "Harlem" which would seem to contradict it.

"To have a story," I told him, "I need an 'angle.'"

* * * *

I THINK Jones was unimpressed. He sat in the front of his cab, saying nothing.

"The fact of the matter is," I said. "I found just one dope peddler in the 'Harlem' of after midnight, and on the other hand, I found hundreds of law-abiding citizens having a good time.

"I went to 'The Big Apple' on Fourteenth street, and I liked the music of the Washboard Blues Band, even if they did play some of their tunes with automobile horns and washboards. The music was a little strange, but it had what all the orchestras are trying to achieve. It had swing.

"If I had seen anything with an 'angle' to it, I could write about that particular colored night club, but I saw nothing I have not seen in night clubs all over town.

"Some of the dancing was wild and funny. Some of it was careful and graceful. Abdullah, the manager, is known as Sheik Abdullah, but the headwaiters in many of the best night clubs in town have stranger names than that.

"If there had been humorous talk, such as I have read in stories about the colored folks, I might have made a column about that, but it is not feature news when they sit about quietly listening to the music, arising occasionally to dance.

"I went to the Republic Night Club," I said, "but I found nothing to write about there. The colored folks sat around in their night club and listened to the music and a man named Ray St. Claire sang very beautifully. If I had only overheard some peculiar dialogue, such as I read in stories, I might have written about that night club. But, since I heard nothing but the laughter of students and workers, shopkeepers and playboys, I have nothing to write about. That is the same kind of laughter you hear in the night clubs all over town.

"After that," I said, "I went around to a restaurant on Seventh street, called 'Jimmy's.' It was crowded, though the hour was late, and there were many on the sidewalk out in front. I had a coffee and a sandwich, and, while I ate, I listened very intently for some of the 'comic' dialogue I have heard attributed to the colored folks. But I heard none. I heard the young couples talking quietly in the booths and I heard the large parties roaring out laughter at a common joke. The laughter had a rich fullness to it, but there was nothing so unusual that I could write about it.

"I went into the Howard Theater at 3:30 this morning," I said, "and I saw a rehearsal, but it was like the rehearsals I have seen in many theaters, and it was not like the accepted idea of Washington's 'Harlem.' The music may have been a bit wilder and more fervent, but the musicians were laboring as hard as do all musicians, striving for the desired effect.

* * * *

"ONE CANNOT WRITE about these things because when one writes about Washington's 'Harlem,' one must write about the unusual. One must write about the comic element. One must write about those things which differ such a great deal from the rest of the city. You can't get readers interested in these things I have been telling you," I said, "for there is 'no angle' to them. You cannot just say that night life in Washington's 'Harlem' is no better . . . and no worse . . . than the night life in other sections of the city."

"I don't see why you couldn't print that, and I think it would be a good thing, too," said William T. Jones, who is a Negro and who drives a taxicab.

And when he said it so very simply, I couldn't see why it couldn't be printed either.

C. Dana Gibson, Famous Artist, to Live in Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Charles Dana Gibson, noted illustrator of the glamorous "Gibson Girls," famous at the turn of the century, will establish permanent residence next spring at Miradore, Greenwood, with Mrs. Gibson, it was announced today by his son, Langhorne Gibson.

Owned by Mrs. Ronald Tree, of England, Miradore was formerly occupied by Dabney Langhorne. Lady Nancy Astor, member the British Parliament, one of the "Gibson Girls" herself and sister of Mrs. Gibson, spent a great part of her girlhood and early youth at the country estate.

Langhorne Gibson said that his mother and father will spend most of their time here but will also maintain their home in Maine.

Alfred Vanderbilt Turns 25, Collects $5,000,000 More

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, wealthy young turfman, became a year older and $5,000,000 richer today.

He was 25 and on his anniversary received his second one-fourth share of an estimated $20,000,000 left him from the estate of his father, who died in the sinking of the Lusitania.

He celebrated by buying a 450-acre farm to extend his horse breeding and training activities in Worthington Valley, near Baltimore, and by spending the day with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Emerson, at her estate at Sandy Point, Long Island. He will receive the remainder of his inheritance in equal shares on his 30th and 35th birthdays.

Gov. Graves Joins REA Power Fight

By the Associated Press.

Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama joined rural electrifications officials yesterday in preparing a defense against the Alabama Power Co.'s charge that the REA competed illegally with private industry.

The Governor conferred with John M. Carmody, REA administrator; V. D. Nicholson, REA general counsel; M. L. Ramsay, director of research and information; Loy J. Davis, superintendent of the Cherokee County Electrical Membership Corporation of Alabama, and a group of Justice Department lawyers.

The power company asked the Federal District Court here for an injunction against loans in the Cherokee co-operative. It contends the farmers organization planned to use TVA power despite the fact its loan application sought funds for a generating plant as well as distribution lines.

Soil Conservation Declared 'Belated'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 22.—Dr. H. H. Bennett, Washington chief of soil conservation, attending the three-day conference of Region 1 here, said today that it is going to take the organized efforts of the farmer public and government to make up for the destruction by erosion and floods.

He said the United States started from 75 to 100 years late, adding:

"Already 100,000,000 acres of once fertile land have been ruined for agricultural purpose, 125,000,000 damaged and another 100,000,000 acres threatened by erosion in the United States today."

An inspection was made of soil erosion projects in Little Antietam and Israel Creeks watersheds in Washington County.

Serious Drama Will Dominate New Film Week

"Dead End," Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of Sidney Kingsley's stage play, originally produced by Norman Geddes, will be the screen attraction at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning Friday. In this film version of the gripping drama of New York's riverfront—which adheres strictly to the spirit of the play—the principal roles are played by Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor and the youthful players who appeared in the New York production. The famous stage setting has been faithfully reproduced for the cinema and a long cast of subordinate players afford splendid support.

At the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, the major screen offering will be Mervy LeRoy's picturization of "They Won't Forget," based on Ward Greene's novel of "Murder in the Deep South." The foremost roles in this bitter indictment of sectional prejudice and crooked politics are impersonated by Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, Otto Kruger, Alyn Joslyn, Edward Norris and Lana Turner. A huge ensemble appears in support. One of the most exciting and controversial of recent screen productions, "They Won't Forget" traces closely the story of an actual lynching case that occurred in the South and aroused national interest.

"Souls at Sea" will be the screen offering for the week beginning tomorrow at the Earle Theater, with Gary Cooper and George Raft in the co-stellar roles. In addition to the co-stars, the cast includes Frances Dee, Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey, Robert Cummings, Virginia Weidler, Olympe Bradna, Porter Hall and Joseph Schildkraut, who recently acquited himself so well as Capt. Dreyfus in "The Life of Emile Zola," with Paul Muni. On the stage, the entertainment will be provided by Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears, one of the most popular feminine orchestras that regularly play the Earle. Many specialties are introduced during the progress of the turn, including Miss Hutton's dances.

"One Hundred Men and a Girl," starring the juvenile Deanna Durbin and Leopold Stokowski, with a fine cast in support, having scored tremendously during the first two weeks of its engagement, will be continued for a third week at RKO-Keith's, beginning tomorrow. As a perfect blend of music, comedy and drama, this subject presents the finest example of deft production the screen has to offer. Adolphe Menjou, Eugene Pallette, Alice Brady and Jed Prouty lead the large ensemble of supporting players. The auxiliary features also will be continued, with a new issue of the Pathe News.

Sonja Henie and Tyrone Powers are the co-stellar players in "Thin Ice," the Twentieth Century-Fox production to be seen in a repeat engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Important supplementary roles are taken by Arthur Treacher, Alan Hale, Raymond Walburn and Sig Rumann. Miss Henie's ice skating is one of the marvels of the times.

James Cagney returns to the local screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow for a week's engagement as star of "Something to Sing About," in which he assumes the role of a song-and-dance man and proves himself a "hoofer" of the first rank. The story is one that reveals much of the "inside" of picture-making in Hollywood and affords a fruitful role for a new singing leading woman in the person of Evelyn Daw, making her screen debut in this subject. Other pivotal roles are played by Richard Tucker, William Frawley, Gene Lockhart and Mona Barrie. Bob Crosby, brother of the celebrated Bing, and his orchestra will headline the stage portion of the new bill. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestra will complete the program.

Like "One Hundred Men and a Girl," Beniamino Gigli's initial screen appearance in "Forever Yours," now playing to capacity business at the Little Theater, has aroused such widespread interest among music lovers that this Grand National release will be held over for another week, beginning Sunday. In this aria-studded picture one of the world's greatest tenors is supported by Joan Gardner and a capable cast.

The foremost short subjects on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, to be inaugurated tomorrow, will be the "March of Time," with its thrilling "clip" on the war in China, and "Pests of 1937." Complete newsreel coverage of the world and new cartoon comedies will round out the bill of abbreviated camera items.

"A Pageant of Burlesque Folly" is the title of the new variety attraction that will open a week's engagement at Jimmy Lake's Gayety Theater with the usual matinee performance on Sunday. Harry "Hickey" Le Van supported by Foster and Jacobs, will supply the fun in this combination of musical comedy, vaudeville and extravaganza. The stellar feminine roles will be taken by Evelyn Whitney and Pearl Mylie, supported by a nimble-footed chorus of vivacious young women.

The next screen attraction at the Belasco Theater, following the successful run of the current "Birth," will be "Sex Madness." This is a study of social conditions of a nature that will impel its presentation to segregated audiences.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Drama of Slave-Running Days Has Rare Moments of Grandeur and Brings Back "Old-Timers;" "Susan and God" Proves Actors' Mettle; Play Tournament to Start; Eddie Cantor Honored; Notes of Theater.

WITH just a tinge of "Slave Ship" in its opening sequences—but a sanely rationalized suggestion of the hideousness of the traffic in blacks of a century ago—"Souls at Sea," the deeply impressive screen play that is to be seen at the Earle Theater beginning tomorrow, presents several aspects of distinctiveness and distinction.

BELL.

To begin with, it provides Gary Cooper with one of the most effective roles he has had and for the first time within memory permits George Raft to appear in a wholly sympathetic character. Also, it brings back to the cinema, even if only briefly, some of the old favorites who have not been seen in distinguishable roles for many months— among them, Lina Basquette, erstwhile dynamic brunette "vamp;" Monte Blue, for whom you will have to watch sharply, and that veteran character actor, Tully Marshall, looking more fit than in any of his most recent previous appearances before the camera.

But it is the thunderingly spectacular shipwreck on the high seas that will make this subject most memorable in many minds. Here is a sequence that marks the peak of tempestuous action in a powerfully built film play that holds the constant threat of just such developments. One is fore-armed for something "big" in "Souls at Sea" by the expansive breadth of the production. From first flash to final fadeout, the picture is executed in Paramount's best style, which, when the demands of the drama require it, is a very impressive style, indeed.

While it is interesting to note the presence of old-timers in the cast, it is no less pleasant to make note of the upward swing of newcomers. I have in mind particularly the extremely able work contributed to this moving document, founded vaguely on an actual court case of 100 years ago, by Olympe Bradna, representing the newest generation of a family long associated with another branch of "show business."

The gifted and lovely Miss Bradna, cast opposite George Raft, here demonstrates the possession of a great talent for the screen. Her performance is unaffected and true and productive of the most tenderly pathetic scenes in the play. There is a genuine tug in the tragic incident in which Raft settles himself beside her lifeless form in water up to his shoulders and goes down with the ship at the urge of the only love he ever has known. By virtue of their portrayals in this picture, Raft takes on a new lease of film life and importatnce and Miss Bradna blazes the way to a brilliant career in the studios.

A great deal, of late, has come across the drama desks in praise of "Souls at Sea." Yesterday afternoon's private preview in the Warner projection room in the Earle Theater Building proved all of it, mirabile dictu, to have been true.

This column's tattered Stetson is off to Paul McGrath and the other members of the cast of "Susan and God," at the National, for the quality of the performance of the Rachel Crothers comedy-drama given Tuesday night, following the tragic events of the night before. Instead of a bewildered group of principals, staggering and stumbling through the breezy lines and "business" of the play that had had its premiere only on Monday evening, Gertrude Lawrence, Mr. McGrath and the rest, like the sterling troupers they are, gave a letter-perfect and spontaneous reading of the brittle lines with no sign of faltering. The audience's realization of the strain he must have been under was expressed in applause that must have been an inspiration to Mr. McGrath. And again "Susan and God" was accorded a half-dozen or more curtain calls at its end, one for the actor who had done so splendid a job of stepping on such short notice into the role played 24 hours before by Osgood Perkins, whose sudden death shocked not only the Capital, but the entire theatrical world. No little credit, also, was merited by Douglas Gilmore, who resumed his original role on practically no notice.

But an unfortunate and vindictive jinx still seems to pursue the "Susan and God" company. Yesterday's matinee performance had to be canceled owing to an eye ailment suffered by Gertrude Lawrence, who was forbidden by her physicians to apply make-up for the time being. Matinee tickets were refunded at the box-office, or exchanged for later performances. Producer John Golden was one of those disappointed yesterday afternoon. He had left New York to see his new play before learning of the matinee cancellation.

Eddie Cantor Anniversary Week, in recognition of the comedian's 25 years as a prominent figure in the amusement world, will be observed nationally from October 24 to 30, according to a Los Angeles bulletin reaching this desk yesterday.

The executive committee in charge of this tribute to the button-eyed comic includes Joseph M. Schenck, chairman; James A. Farley, Will H. Hays, Gov. Frank F. Merriam of California, Paul Muni and Louis B. Mayer.

The week's celebration throughout the country will be climaxed by a testimonial dinner in honor of Cantor at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on Thursday, October 28, to be broadcast over a Nation-wide hook-up. Cantor's anniversary week will be sponsored by an honorary committee of 100 leaders in religious, business, civic, philanthropic and other fields of activity throughout the United States.

In case you should feel, by any chance, that Eddie Cantor does not rate all this respectful interest by these various groups, I suggest that you exhume your back copies of the Saturday Evening Post and read the autobiographical story of his career, published under the title of "My Life Is in Your Hands"—and written by the late Dave Freedman.

If one more reference to Paul McGrath might be permissible, it should be stated, as a jog to laggard memories, that Washington has more reasons than "Susan and God," Helen Hayes' "The Good Fairy" and Ina Claire's "Ode to Liberty" for remembering him as an able and versatile actor. At the Belasco Theater, the week of April 16, 1934, Mr. McGrath redeemed an utterly inferior production of Mordaunt Shairp's "The Green Bay Tree," by the single-handed excellence of his portrayal of the role of Mr. Dulcimer, the persuasive hedonist. Without Mr. McGrath, there would have been no play. Incidentally, his career in the drama began at Carnegie Tech, from which he graduated almost directly to Broadway.

For those who wonder where our future actors and actresses are coming from, it should be a comforting thought that the National Academy of Stage Training, scheduled to open for the season on Monday, October 4, reports the largest enrollment in its history.

Founded in 1932, this institution has gone steadily forward as a strictly professional school for the theater and in the five years of its existence has sent more than a score of aspiring young thespians on to Broadway under major producers. Many members of local acting groups also are graduates. The curriculum is a broad one, embracing every line of theatrical activity.

Speaking of local acting groups, 15 well-known Washington directors, heading the organizations entered in the forthcoming One-Act Play Tournament of the District of Columbia, opening Tuesday, October 12, will pilot their players through five nights of short plays in Roosevelt High School auditorium. The four productions deemed best in the preliminaries will be entered in the finals, to be held on Saturday night, October 23, with the Capital's drama desks serving as final judges to "pick the winner" and runner-up for 1937.

The directors and tournament committee will meet on Sunday at 2 p. m. to perfect arrangements for running off both the preliminaries and finals.

Getting-Out-From-Under Note.

Having gone against it last year, I hereby take time by the horns, the bull by the fetlock, or something, and nominate my esteemed contemporary, Andrew R. Kelley, for his old job of chairman of the board of judges for the finals!

Leaps to Fame in Bitter Role

Following her first Hollywood screen test, Mervyn LeRoy chose Gloria Dickson, whose latest likeness appears above, for the leading feminine role in his bitterly controversial film production of "They Won't Forget," based on Ward Greene's novel of "Murder in the Deep South." Miss Dickson's performance in the part of the harassed young wife made her a star over night. "They Won't Forget" opens at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 22.—Settin' around (Warner Brothers). One thing that has always amazed me is the seeming inability of Warner Brothers to create an outstanding feminine star. No studio spends more money on its Class A pictures, no studio shops more diligently for the best directors, writers and cameramen, no studio builds more lavish sets or hires more skillful beauticians— and yet the fact remains that Warner Brothers have never built one girl to top-notch rating.

KAY FRANCIS.

Ruth Chatterton came to them at the peak of her fame—two years later, thanks to ill-advised roles, she was a has-been. Kay Francis was already a star when she signed here—today, she ranks lower on the box office ratings than she did five years ago. Ruby Keeler lasted only as long as the first spasm of the craze for dancing pictures. Olivia de Havilland is well-liked—but her role is always of secondary importance to that of the hero. Bette Davis, the one great actress of the Warner Brothers lot, is seldom given the chance to make the most of her ability and hardly ranks as popular favorite.

On the other hand, male stars have been manufactured here in wholesale lots—James Cagney, Paul Muni, Leslie Howard, Errol Flynn, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Joe E. Brown, Edward G. Robinson, George Arliss. Warner Brothers seem to be hopelessly biased in favor of stories that glorify the male of the species. It is an odd situation in an industry which has proved by trial that women stars have greater drawing power than men.

There is an epidemic of colds on the "Tonight's Our Night" set, and Claudette Colbert, here on loan from Paramount, is in her glory. A great physician was lost to the world when she became an actress—medicines fascinate her and she was born with the "curing complex." The sound of a sniffle arouses her ardor—and the honk of a lustily blown nose is a bugle call ordering the "charge." For days she has been cramming her pet remedies down the throats of her fellow workers until the poor things run like sheep when they see that "Louis Pasteur" expression light her face. Today I listened while she told Basil Rathbone how to rout a cold.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Sept. 22.

DICK MERRILL, the aviator, received an offer from Lord Beaverbrook, the British publisher who sponsored his coronation flight, to give up his American residence and fly for Beaverbrook in Europe. Merrill leaves for London October 1. His first flight probably will be a round-the-world flight from London . . . The Screen Actors Guild will go to bat with the March of Time, aiming to sign all the actors employed there. The M. of T., however, insists that it has newsreel status.

GEORGE WOOD, Harry Richman's manager, will produce a musical comedy here, with backing from the Spreckles sugar fortune . . . Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein just flew in from the Coast, but on separate planes. This is because of their pact—so that in the event of a plane accident their children won't be left parentless . . . That strike at the Popeye animated cartoon studios is expected to be settled this week . . . Garson Kanin met Sam Goldwyn, told him he just had seen a preview of "Marco Polo" and assured him: "Don't worry, Mr. Goldwyn. That picture looks like a million bucks." . . . "A million?" Goldwyn screamed. "It cost me TWO million!"

A FEW NIGHTS AGO, in Hollywood, an informal entertainment and dance was tendered by the Hollywood Scottsboro Committee. It was extremely informal and was attended by most of the screen notables . . . At 4:15 a. m. Robert Benchley and Donald Ogden Stewart, whose indignation had been mounting, put in a long-distance phone call to Gov. Graves of Alabama—and demanded the IMMEDIATE release of the remaining Scottsboro boys!

• • • •

ORSON WELLES, who portrays The Shadow, is directed in those radio broadcasts by Martin Gable. Gable will appear as Cassius in "Julius Caesar"—which will be directed by Orson Welles . . . When those four operas, which Hal Roach and Mussolini's son are going to produce for the movies in Rome, are completed—they'll be distributed in this country by M-G-M . . . Taylor Holmes' role in "I'd Rather Be Right" will be that of Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau.

• • • •

CAPT. ALEX PAPANA, whose flight from New York to Bucharest is being backed by King Carol of Rumania, bought the plane in which Merrill and Lambie made their round-trip flight across the Atlantic. The price was $45,000 . . . 300 American Legionnaires marched into Roseland dance hall on Broadway—and took their own band in with them . . . So many Legionnaires have tried to crash backstage at "The Women" that Betty Lawford and Ilka Chase of that show yesterday had bars put on the windows of their dressing room!

The National Board of the American Federation of Musicians now is completing arrangements with the recording and wired-music companies to displace the ban set August 14. The local Musicians Union's contract will be signed this week . . . The Rockefellers are planning to display an exhibit of crown jewels here next month.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The Department of Agriculture Graduate School—which Dr. A. F. Woods has made grow by leaps, bounds and in public interest since assuming the directorship in 1926—will offer one of the most popular courses — administrative management—beginning at 5 p. m., October 4, it was learned yesterday.

The course will be given in the Agriculture Auditorium on each succeeding Friday for ten weeks, the classes opening at 5 p. m. The lecturers, Dr. Wood said yesterday, will be leaders in the field, selected from the higher institutions of learning in America.

The Secretary of Agriculture will act as honorary chairman, with Peter Keplinger as chairman. The tentative field to be covered is as follows: The national movement for better public service, objectives and management, history and principles of management, the mechanics of management—production, and the mechanisms of management—office, relation of organization to management, the art of management, the employe and management, the public's interest in public management and education in management.

The 1937-38 session opened on Monday, with a general enrollment topping previous years. The rise of the school is interesting. It was begun in 1920 by national authorization. In 1926, when Dr. Woods became the director, there were 150 persons enrolled in 12 courses; last year the enrollment reached 1,300, with 60 courses offered.

To date, the course, elements of personnel administration, has proved most popular, if enrollment is a test. A booklet of lectures from this course has proved tremendously popular. Every department in the Federal Government has obtained copies, some 200 or more.

While the school acts in co-operation with American University in many courses, it otherwise holds classes wherever space may be found in Government buildings here. Some of these are in the basement of the Smithsonian Institution; some in the Agriculture Auditorium. And yesterday the private—but fairly large office of Dr. Woods—was set-up with a blackboard and students' chairs.

Dr. Woods, the quick, active director, has an interesting background, which reads as follows: A. F. Woods, B.Sc., A.M., D.Agr., D.Sci., LL.D., dean and director of agriculture, forestry and home economics, and president of the University of Minnesota in the absence of President Vincent, 1910-17; president of the Maryland State College and of the University of Maryland, 1917-26; director of scientific work of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, 1926-34, and directors of the graduate school and chairman of the council.

Joker Found.

The U. F. W. A. research staff says it has turned up a joker in minimum wage bills that were introduced in the Seventy-fifth Congress. "Though all bills purport minimum wage bills, no provision is made at all for those persons now receiving from $800 to $900 a year in the custodial service! The U. F. W. A. legislative staff is working on a bill which would correct this situation, it was announced. The workers outside the classified service also were indicated as similarly forgotten men. The number is something like 260,000.

There seems to be hot A. F. G. E. activity in cold Alaska: To the national office comes word from Anchorage that 41 members have been added to the lodge. It seems that a bunch of the boys have been whooping it up.

Miss Edna Murphy, of the General Land Office, who has been ill for some time in a hospital, is reported improving rapidly.

The District Department, A. F. G. E., a group full of serenity and brotherly love since the expulsion of some of the brethren, may wax lively tomorrow night. They elect officers then. Curiously, none of the members seem overheated about any of the proposed candidates. All of the prospects appear generally popular. And it may be a relief not to have any bad feeling in an election. But it should be lively, withal.

Godfrey V. Wickware, live-wire executive assistant to A. F. G. E.'s President Stengle, has overseen the organization of 10 new lodges since the middle of July. And this in despite of the heat of summer, the heat of opposition from other quarters and all the bustle of pre-convention arrangements. The latest two lodges are in Federal Power Commission and Army Ordinance. The membership of the new locals is said to be particularly outstanding.

Examinations for positions are announced by the Civil Service Commission, as follows: Medical social worker, various grades ($2,600 to $3,800), Children's Bureau, Labor Department; associate botanist, ($3,200); assistant botanist ($2,600), Bureau of Plant Industry, Agriculture Department. The closing date is October 18.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Forcing a Premature Decision.

A great many hands offer alternative lines of play, one having no considerable percentage over the other. Whenever possible, declarer must plan his offense in such a fashion that he can try one method and, if it fails, fall back on the other. But here is where shrewd defense can take a hand in the proceedings. It is not difficult to divine declarer's intention and to force him to make his decision before he has explored the first possibility. This may be somewhat obscure, but I trust my meaning will become clearer in the description of the following hand:

Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's second bid resulted in the partnership's reaching the wrong contract. South should have bid two notrump overtwo clubs, instead of urging a game in spades.

Against the actual four spade contract, West hit upon a remarkably lucky opening, namely, the deuce of diamonds. East's Queen was allowed to hold, and the diamond continuation was taken by the Ace. Declarer now saw that success depended on one of two factors; either to find a 3-3 club split, which would afford a discard of the heart Queen, or a successful heart finesse. Since dummy's spade Ace could not remain as an entry, declarer properly led a club and ducked in dummy. East, after winning with the ten, rose nobly to the situation. He naturally viewed the passing of a club with deep suspicion. The mere fact that East himself had clubs stopped again was no reason to relax; in fact, quite to the contrary. Declarer had bid very strongly and had been discovered to hold no more than the Ace in diamonds and nothing in clubs. What was more likely than that he held both the Ace and Queen of hearts? If East were to return a diamond, thus putting West on lead, declarer would, at his leisure, be able to draw trumps, then discover that the club suit did not break and proceed to his alernate line of play, namely, the heart finesse.

East scotched this by a very simple maneuver; instead of returning a diamond, he led a heart. Now, declarer's two separate chances were abruptly boiled down into one. He had to decide then and there whether to try the heart finesse, or to play the Ace in the hope that the club suit would break and provide the vital discard. It was no discredit to the declarer that he guessed wrong, putting up the heart Ace, and staking his success on the club break which failed to materialize.

Little High School Gentlemen Go in for Cooking, Baby Care

Husbands of Tomorrow Learning How to Run the Home When Their Wives Go Out; 4,586 Take Course Over Nation.

Courses in cooking, child care and home arrangements are becoming popular with the high school boys of today.

And this does not imply that they are sissies, either, the Office of Education, which made the announcement, hastened to explain.

Throughout the Nation, from California to New York and Maine to Florida, home economics courses in senior and junior high schools are increasingly selected by the husbands of tomorrow, Miss Rua Van Horn, Federal agent for home economic education, asserted.

The only complete report at present available is that of 1934-35. This showed there were 2,447 boys in these classes, which formerly were confined to girls. And last school year, from reports at present being completed, there were 4,586 boys taking the courses, while Miss Van Horn looks for still another increase.

Primarily many of the boys take the course because they want to make the business of homemaking a partnership affair. They also want to learn money management, family relationship and clothing care and selection.

If the youngsters remain bachelors for a long while, what they have learned about budgeting will help them, Miss Van Horn explained. It may also be necessary for them to learn how to press a suit or patch a tear or even cook flap jacks and waffles.

"One school I visited in the Southwest last year had a number of boys enrolled in such a class," said Miss Van Horn.

"They elected to learn to make waffles. They explained that many of them did not have much money, and when they entertained they thought it would be a fine thing to know how to give waffle parties."

Topping the list is Alabama, with courses in home economics for boys in 130 schools. New York was second with 114.

Schools in other States offering these courses to boys include 70 in Pennsylvania, 43 in New Jersey, 38 in Arkansas, 17 in Florida, 30 in Louisiana and 52 in Mississippi.

Boston Tea Party made History in Colonial Days

Greatest AMOCO-GAS

The history of America is a story of courage . . . of an unconquerable spirit that turned a colonial wilderness into the most productive country in the world.

It's a big jump from the small towns of colonial days to the great cities of the present! And it's a big jump from the transportation of the eighteenth century to that of 1937. The story of the automobile and of the development of better motor fuels is an interesting chapter in American history. American Oil Company is proud of the major part it has played in this story!

American Oil Company revolutionized the automotive industry—made possible today's high compression motor—by introducing Amoco-Gas, the first and original special motor fuel.

Amoco-Gas, for years, has held more world's records than any other motor fuel! Time after time it has been proved the world's best.

But recently new scientific developments made this world's finest motor fuel even better. New processes were invented and patented . . . new equipment perfected . . . the greatest and most modern refining unit in the world was made even more modern.

The result is that the new Amoco-Gas is the greatest in our history! It gives even better performance, smoother operation than last year's superb Amoco-Gas! Always the best — now better than ever!

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How Best and Most Fully to Occupy Time, Asks Wife Whose Children Are Grown and Gone.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a middle-aged woman whose children have grown up and left home—even the home town. I have a competent maid who has been with me some time. I play golf about three mornings a week and bridge perhaps two afternoons. I give one day a week (or less) to civic work, and spend two hours in church. We go out very little in the evening and I do a great deal of reading then. I think this varied program provides for my needs—physical, social, altruistic, religious and mental—and, as you see, it occupies less than half my waking hours.

* * * *

My husband objects to all this activity and says I don't appreciate my home or I would stay in it more. But what should I do in it? I see no point in making one's clothes at home, unless one has a especial knack for it. We live in a neighborhood where it would not "fit the picture" for me to do my own housework; and besides, there is no financial necessity for it. Can you tell me how I might better, or more fully occupy my time? MIDDLE AGED.

* * * *

DEAR MIDDLE AGED: If you maintain a comfortable and orderly home for your husband and always are there when he is there, or expected to be there, I see no justification for his criticizing your self-respecting, socially approved activities outside the home. And I disagree absolutely with his theory that you should spend most of your time at home simply because it is a pleasant place; or that you are implying lack of appreciation of your home in having interests outside of and away from it.

* * * *

However, if you would like to humor him and at the same time keep yourself agreeably and constructively occupied, why not develop a hobby which would require lots of home work, so to speak? If you have the means, you might collect antiques, and yourself master the art of restoring the finish of fine old wood. If this doesn't appeal to you, then you might try your hand at painting, water coloring, modeling in clay or writing. Or you might turn back the pages of time and take up piano-playing where you left off as a girl, working toward a more perfect mastery of the keyboard and a maturer appreciation of the meaning of music. In the spring of the year, you might start a garden; or investigate right now the possibilities of fall planting for spring and summer bloom.

* * * *

You know better than anyone else what your potential talents and creative interests are; what youthful dreams of personal accomplishment were laid aside when you became, first, a wife; and, later, a mother. The thing to do now is to get out these old dreams, dust them off, and see which of them can yet be turned to good account. You have 20 to 30 years of life expectancy ahead and with your children grown and gone, you owe it to yourself to discover other channels of self expression for the years to come. Some time ago I talked with a woman who had become, in middle life, a self-taught painter of excellent portraits. She said this:

"Women past 45 should stop trying to amuse themselves and find something to do on the constructive side. They've got to do it if they want to be happy. They've got to make a decision which will be as important in shaping the final third of their lives as was their choice of career or husband in shaping the middle sector of their existence. They've got to decide what they're actually going to do next."

"Almost any woman of that age, on taking early stock of herself," she said, "will realize either that there is something she can do to express herself, or that there is something she would very much like to do—and in either case it amounts to the same thing. Having reached a decision, she should make a beginning. That's practically all there is to it—just making a beginning." M. H.

She Votes for Gallantry.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of September 20, a man who signed himself "Towel Hanger Upper" expressed his annoyance with a married lady of his acquaintance who dared to admit she preferred polished manners to bathroom tidiness in her husband. He asked your opinion in the matter; and invited a general discussion of this "moot subject."

* * * *

Well, tell him for me: During 15 years of marriage, I have never yet had to pick up a wet towel, toss a soiled shirt into the laundry bag, or hang up a suit of clothes. But, on the other hand, neither have I ever been on the receiving end of a graceful compliment as to how I looked; nor have I been told that a painstakingly prepared dinner was good; nor have I been helped either into or out of a car when I really needed assistance.

* * * *

Thirty minutes a day would have tidied the bathroom, had it needed tidying, and the labor involved wouldn't have killed any wife. But 24-hours-a-day, 365-days-a-year, starvation for deserved compliments and hunger for courteous treatment has, after 15 years, nearly killed me; and—may I say to Mr. Towel Hanger Upper—it has been a slow, painful death.

Shoes Will Match Dress Hues, Paris Exhibits Indicate

Patou mannequins wore low-cut kid pumps without heels or with outlined open heels and ties of kid across the ankle. Slippers without heels are held in place with two side ribbons of kid starting at the front of the heel, crossed in back and tied in a bow at the front of the angle.

Schiaparelli uses an ankle tie of kid with a simple classic pump, the favored autumn shoe style for daytime wear. Black kid, Bordeaux and brown were the colors worn with with her collection. Patou's color choice included black, deep Bordeaux for wear with the new "Florentine red" of that house, and bronze kid for brown, red and green costumes.

Clothes That Play Many Roles Designed for Career Woman

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE "CAREER WOMAN" was given first choice in a fashion show of 12 acts and 100 scenes, in a style presentation Tuesday night, at Lansburgh's. The show was under the direction of Ethel Holland Little, fashion editor of a widely known magazine. Thirteen different costumes were worn by mannequins to suggest simple or elaborate wardrobes for the business woman, depending upon her choice of career and the extent of her budget.

A basic black dress with various accessory changes was the clever answer to the one business dress which would serve for numerous occasions. A four-piece tweed suit was exploited as a practical choice—serving as suit, and topcoat to be worn with frocks. Afternoon dresses of velveteen and silk crepe; cocktail ensembles; full-length and short coats of cloth or fur; evening gowns of velvet and crepe, were other presentations planned to add glamour to the wardrobe of the career woman.

Throughout the entire fashion show, luxury and glitter were featured in clothes for both day wear and evening. Among the 100 costumes shown, there were "Tom Boy" fashions for active sports; the "color mad" era, including American adaptations of the vivid colors shown at the Paris exposition; velvets for wear from morn 'til night; "fireworks" fashions, emphasizing brilliance in trimming; and the new corseted silhouette. The show ended with a gala wedding party—the attendants wearing vintage tones and Pompeiian rose.

Improved Diet Betters Health

Taller Children Result From Scientific Food Selection.

NOT ONLY are the American college boys and girls today taller and stronger than their parents at a similar age, but they are more beautiful.

The improvement in health is attributed to good diets by Lewis N. Waters, research vice president of the General Foods Corporation, who recently addressed the food technologists at their first conference at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mr. Waters said: "The wallflower is doomed. With the aid of food technology she will probably vanish from social life, for proper foods will help make most women more vitally alive and more youthful attractive. They can make her more looking.

"Proper diets can help attain beautiful teeth. They will improve most complexions and many dispositions. The healthy woman is happier, hence more attractive.

"Millions of women have been studying the scientific care and feeding of children. As a result, we see modern children healthier and sturdier; yes, and handsomer, than we were at their ages. In a group of Eastern colleges we learn that students average nearly 2 inches taller and several pounds heavier than those of a generation ago. A part of the credit unquestionably must go to today's better and more varied foods."

Mr. Waters reported increased zeal among the housewives in the art of cookery. Preparation of meals in the kitchen is becoming a science and an art, he said. The number of schools offering home economics has more than doubled in the past two decades.

The food technologists point out that war, war threats and international suspicions may be dietic as well as economic and political. They blame faulty diets for part of the world's current war jitters.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE OLD WIVES' tales and the smart young pediatricians prescriptions agree on one thing—that home is the best place for a baby. And certainly you'd never get any argument out of a young mother on that score, because there's no lure for her in tripping around the country with a small baby. However, there are times when it seems necessary to take baby away from home, and then he usually stands the trip a lot better than his mama.

There are a lot of home conveniences that a lady with a baby misses when she goes visiting. Even so simple a thing as a bed for his little highness becomes a very complicated problem. Nine chances out of ten there won't be a crib at grandmother's or auntie's, since the last baby's bed has invariably been passed around till its ownership is obscured. And how to sleep a baby comfortably without a crib isn't nearly as easy a question to answer as you'd think. The first advice we have to offer is a "don't"—don't try to have him sleep with mother or anybody else, because neither baby nor his bedmate will get many winks.

If baby is wee tiny, the problem is easy. A clothes basket, a dresser drawer or a folding carriage will be fine. But those won't work after baby is any size because he'll need more room. Besides when he reaches the explorative age he'll find any of those beds just pie to get out of.

The best system we've discovered, after plenty of personal experience, you may be sure, is a harness such as you get for his carriage. The long strap attached to the harness can be drawn through springs of the bed on the side next to the wall, then fasten both ends to the harness. Or the strap can be drawn through the bedpost in the corner of the room and attached to the harness. Be sure to shorten the strap enough so that there won't be length enough to enable the baby to wiggle off the bed. Otherwise leave as much leeway as possible for moving about.

New Games for Parties

No trick to work it. Have each girl and man draw from boxes filled with slips bearing names of popular songs. You have only two slips for each song. Then each person, as soon as he has drawn, goes about humming or whistling the tune named on his slip until he finds his musical duplicate. Fun? Even shy Sue and bashful Bill unbend.

Here's another secret of the popular hostess. Keep people circulating. Play a team game—such as Pass the Ring. All you need is two long pieces of stout cord and two curtain rings.

Pick two of your peppiest guests for captains and have each choose a team until the whole crowd's lined up in two rows. Then give each team a cord to hold and each captain a ring.

When you say "Go," the ring zips along the cord from player to play. The team which gets its ring to the end of the cord first is the winner! But—only the right hand must touch the ring. If anyone uses the left, the ring must go back to the captain and down the line again.

And how's this for a quiet minute? Fill a "Mystery Box" with odds and ends—an egg-beater, a can opener, a potato—turn out the lights and have everybody guess what they are by touch. The guesses will be funny.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Games for Good Parties," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 22.

THE ATLANTIC City beauty queen mess has finally been straightened out—this long time—and I made a special trip to Hackettstown, N. J., to see the pretty little Bette Cooper, who ran out on trips to Hollywood, fur coats and all the rest of it. I found her with a severe case of the sniffles and a fine attack of nerves. Beyond that, Bette was just fine, and a terrific young beauty.

ALICE HUGHES.

Bette made a sad mistake—she thought she would have to pay for the Persian lamb coat which was part of the loot. When she found that she wouldn't, her fit of the vapors was much better. And Alice Emerick, the Texas beauty, who was runner-up, is still runner-up—though congratulations and offers of hearts and hands kept pouring into her hotel suite, just the same.

But little Bette is now all well—blonde, streamlined and dimpled and the pride of New Jersey. And the Atlantic City beauty contest is well over for another year. Those annual affairs have sort of a habit of turning into grief, for one reason or other. Lately they have been better, owing to the fact that Mr. George Tyson has developed the technique of running them to a very high degree. Of course, the "Miss America" thing is pretty far-fetched. It is highly probable that the real "Miss America"—doesn't come next nor near the Atlantic City bathing suit parade. But a close inspection of pretty Bette Cooper, of Hackettstown, impresses me with the feeling that she will do until a better comes along!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Probably the most discussed movie of the day is "Stage Door," in which Margaret Sullivan appeared on the stage before she had her baby. I beat the gun by seeing it in a projection room and realized at once that film fans would immediately split into two camps—Katharine Hepburn versus Ginger Rogers. And there is a newcomer in the cast headed for important things—Andrea Leeds. Keep an eye on this baby doll . . .

We've been playing hostess to three grand Detroit newspaperwomen—Florence Davies, woman's editor, and her two associates, Mary Morris, expert on fashions, and Edith Crumb, who specializes in interior decoration. Hard-workers, this trio, and with a capacity for fun when the toil is over . . .

Louise Bonney, who is working with the design committee for our World's Fair in '39, is just back from the Paris Exposition. She notes a striking and interesting difference between the French capital and our town. Paris has practically no fire escapes, owing to the low buildings. I suppose the French just jump! . . .

A friend tells me that the common American practice of dancing between dinner courses originated in Shanghai, China . . . Sally Rand just checked through town on her way to another long tour of the Nation. The press visited the little fan dancer, as usual. This time she held forth on the cosmic subject of men. "A man is so biological he doesn't interest me," she said. "He is a sort of hobby some people enjoy instead of stamp collecting or building miniature boat models." Well, Sally seems to have cleared up that popular subject in a big way! . . .

A headline in a local paper drove some of my snuffling friends nearly out of their minds. It read "Goldenrod Ranks Among Finest Flowers." After the first frost, I assume.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Sausage as Food.

"How about a little nip of sausage?" may have been the whispered query of a Roman bootlegger long ago.

For in the early days of the Christian church, sausage, because of its popularity at feasts and revels, was banned for a time as an instrument of the devil.

But is was too popular to be banned for long. It is a matter of history that the decree was repealed; and in the meantime, there must have been nonconformists who were only too ready to slip a slice of sausage inside their boots and step out to make a little extra-legal money.

It was in the Middle Ages, when the guild craftsmen reached their power, that sausage making became an art. How patiently the old Italian butchers must have worked to perfect the blending of meat, wine and strong spices that made the sausage of that romantic land so famous. Here was a beginning of artistry in food, to rival the growth of the other arts.

Everyone has read a lot about liver in the last few years. It has been a favorite food with many people for a long time, but the discovery that it was a particularly valuable food in combating certain diseases greatly increased its popularity.

One of the favorite liver foods is liver sausage. Goose liver sausage is a choice food today in Germany and France and a small quantity is sold in the United States. However, the most popular liver sausage sold in this country is a product made primarily of beef, veal and pork livers.

Research into the food value of liver has developed the fact that pork, beef, veal and lamb livers are almost equally valuable—although veal liver is sometimes preferred because it is slightly more tender than the others. When the livers are combined in liver sausage, the consumer gets the benefit of low prices, high food value and a delicious flavor.

Bologna is one of the most popular of the many sausages and ready-to-serve meats.

The food value of bologna is high. It is rich in protein; fairly high in energy content, and 100 per cent edible, of course, with no waste whatever.

The various kinds of sausages are ideal for use in appetizers. For example, small pork sausages, or frankfurters, or Vienna style sausages cut into small pieces, are used by many housewives. The spicy dry sausages are fine for pepping up a tired appetite with many discriminating hostesses.

Dress Buttons to Play Major Role as Trim

Paris (U.P.).—Dress buttons will play an important role as trim for sports frocks this winter, and wooden buttons shown in shop windows are formed into animal heads, signs of the zodiac and flower designs, with belt buckles in the same theme. The monuments of Paris are made into metal buttons for a tailored black wool dress and an ordinary package seal with bits of cut rope extending from beneath it makes a novel belt buckle.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

That was my impression, too, as I watched Archie Mayo filming a recent picture with Olivia de Havilland. There is never a dull moment on the set where Director Mayo cracks the quip! Just for a sample:

Olivia, to Mayo: "I jumped all around the scene! Why in the world did I do that?"

And Mayo comes back with: "Because your hair is curly, dearie. Now . . . smile."

She smiles. "How's that?"

"That," says Mayo expansively, "makes you the queen of Las Vegas boulevard."

This is the sort of thing that goes on all the time when Archie Mayo is directing a picture, but Miss de Havilland is streamlined without a trace of temperament, and Mayo did the reducing.

Archie Mayo used to be the most rotund of Hollywood's famous directors, but last year he took off 55 pounds, bringing his weight down to 195, which is about right for his height. The results were better general health, an absence of mid-afternoon fatigue and a natural pride of accomplishment. He reduced because the fat was uncomfortable and a drain on his strength.

"The very fact," he says, "that I took it off so easily shows that it was useless excess. Except for the first week the diet was no hardship; but that first week was terrible. I always liked good food, and sometimes I would dream of pies and puddings, and wake up in anguish. But this soon passed, and I found I really needed much less food than I had been eating."

Mayo's main exercise was swimming. This was supplemented by a series of exercise for the abdominal muscles and about once a week a body massage. All of this helped, but he claims the diet did the work.

And what about Miss de Havilland, who eats as she pleases. Well, in the first place, she has a beautiful figure because she balances her calories with plenty of healthful exercise. She drinks milk and eats baked potatoes—two things you wouldn't suppose a star would touch. But the minute the scales start acting up, she leaves off desserts—and that might be a good plan for you to adopt.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

In town and out again, with plans to return briefly and then be gone again until Christmas, Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil, wife of The Macneil of Barra, forty-fifth chief of the Clan Macneil of Scotland, finds life these days a series of putting children in school, making plans for the winter, and getting one's house ready for the next occupants.

Arriving in Washington Tuesday after having spent most of the summer in Shorewood, her Long Island home, Mrs. Macneil—the former Mrs. Frederick Hicks—stayed overnight at the Sulgrave Club. Yesterday morning she left for Richmond with Mr. Macneil's daughter, Kathleen Elizabeth, who will be in St. Catherine's School there this year.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Meanwhile, Joan Barbara Macneil is matriculating in St. Mary's in Maryland, and Mrs. Macneil's son, Frederick Hicks, is starting his term at the Kent School, in Connecticut. Mr. Macneil's son, 8-year-old Ian, is now with his father at his farm, Barra House, in Marlboro, Vt.

Returning to the Capital today or tomorrow, Mrs. Macneil will be busy getting her Georgetown house ready for the next occupants, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau. They will move in October 1.

The house, incidentally, is by way of becoming one of the outstanding residences in Georgetown. It was there that Mrs. Macneil—then Mrs. Hicks—entertained frequently. Later, the house continued to be a social center when Williams Phillips and his family lived there while he was Undersecretary of State.

It was occupied by Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Wigglesworth. Earlier in the year—September 5, to be exact—the house was the scene of a picturesque ceremony at which Mrs. Hicks became the bride of Mr. Macneil. Following the wedding, the couple sailed for the Isle of Barra, where they spent most of their honeymoon.

To Spend Christmas In the Capital

When they returned, Mrs. Macneil told friends here they hoped to go back to Barra to spend Christmas, but now plans have changed, and they expect to be in Washington for the holidays.

This will be good news to the many friends both Mr. and Mrs. Macneil have here, as Miss Marie Christie Stevens, daughter of Maj. Pierre Stevens, U. S. A., and Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Macneil was a belle of the Army and Navy and exclusive Capital social circles in her debutante years. In 1930 she was married to Representative Frederick C. Hicks, of New York, and their home was one of the most important official centers in Washington. After his death, she continued to live here until four years ago, when she leased her house to the Phillipses and bought an estate at Port Washington, Long Island.

Mr. Macneil is also widely known in Washington. Before the World War he spent much time here, and was a popular member of the diplomatic set, many members of which he had known in London and other capitals. A distinguished architect, he drew plans for the Cuban Embassy on Sixteenth street, and many other residences here. During the war he returned to the Isle of Barra, but came back afterward.

Kisimul Castle Was Macneil Stronghold

The Isle of Barra has been the Macneil Clan headquarters for hundreds of years and has played an important part in Scotch history. Kisimul Castle on the island is the half ruined stronghold of the clan, which passed out of the family possession almost a hundred years ago, but which may once again become the property of the present chieftain. If and when it does, the ancient castle will be restored by using native material and labor under the direction of Mr. Macneil the forty-fifth chieftain of the clan, who already has worked out plans for making a new castle rise from the ruins of the old.

Today, Barra is a busy little island where the natives are engaged in sheep raising, wool-gathering, fishing and spinning fascinating stories of the Macneil Clan and their ancestral castle surveying 12,000 acres that belonged to the noted family.

Upon leaving Washington, Mrs. Macneil will go to Vermont to join her husband and his son, and later they will go to Long Island to spend some time.

Philosopher Lin To Speak Here

Will Talk at First Baptist Church as Benefit for Chinese.

Lin Yutang, Chinese philosopher, and author of the book, "My Country and My People," will speak on the Sino-Japanese conflict on Friday, October 1, at the First Baptist Church as a benefit for his war-stricken countrymen. Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, heads a large group of patrons and her father will introduce the speaker. Charles Edward Russell, of Washington, is chairman of the event.

Wit will no doubt lighten the serious aspects of Dr. Lin's lecture, as he is known as a humorist as well as a philosopher. He founded the Analects Fortnightly, a magazine devoted to the promotion of humor in China, and is founder and editor of the Human World, in addition to being a contributor to many magazines both in this country and abroad.

Dr. Lin, who is at present finishing a pocket-size dictionary of the Chinese language, and translating into English a number of Chinese stories and essays, has been described by Pearl Buck as "A Chinese modern whose roots are firmly in the past but whose flowering is in the present."

His lecture is being given under the auspices of the Chinese Student Clubs of Washington and Baltimore, the Chinese Women's Association, the Chinese Community Church, and the National Salvation Association.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

AS THOUGH a trip to the Orient on the China Clipper weren't enough excitement for the intrepid Mrs. Anne Archbold, she ran smack into a war as soon as she landed in the Far East. Fortunately, however, she was able to get to Japan from China before the recent horrors so vividly described for us in the newsreels broke out, and is expected at her Reservoir road home tomorrow or the next day.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mrs. Archbold's daughter, Miss Moira Archbold, spent the summer at their Bar Harbor home, and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Archbold, divided their time between cruises in their yacht, the Maine homestead, and a visit with Mrs. Reeve Lewis on Cape Cod.

A TRAVELER returned from New York yesterday is still talking about the pranks of the American Legion members meeting in convention there. Going into the Hotel Pennsylvania during her visit, she saw that some legionnaires had lassoed the chandelier and brought it hurtling down into the lobby.

As our friend watched the parade from a grandstand, the woman next to her leaned over and said: "See that man in the green suit marching in the Kansas delegation? That's my nephew." Our friend obligingly followed her pointing finger and recognized none other than Harry H. Woodring.

Mr. Woodring's unidentified aunt, so our friend reports, was bursting with excitement because she has been invited to visit the Secretary for a week before returning to her home in California.

Mr. Woodring, although not a member of the legion, had to attend all the festivities in his capacity as Secretary of War, and even had to march in the parade which started early in the morning and was still going strong late that night. The Woodrings are expected to return to Washington today.

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson also will return today from the convention. A former president of the legion, he is being ardently supported by this group, which would like to see him made Secretary of War if Mr. Woodring is named Governor General of the Philippines, as is rumored.

American U. To Have Unit Of Alpha Phi

Capital Alumnae Group Names Committees for Activities.

Saturday, October 2, has been set as the date for formal installation of a chapter of Alpha Phi International Fraternity at American University, and committee for the various activities have been appointed by Mrs. Robert Laughlin, president of the Washington alumnae chapter.

Beta Xi, the new chapter at American University, will be the thirty-eighth chapter of Alpha Phi. The fraternity was organized at Syracuse University, New York, in 1872, two years after the founding of the University by Clara Bradley Burdette, Florence Chidester Lukens, Martha Foote Crow, Ida Gilbert Houghton, Jane Higham, Kate Hogoboom Gilbert, Grace Hubbell Shults, Rena Michaels Atchison, Louise Shepard Hancock and Clara Sittser Williams. Several of these "Original Ten" became distinguished in the field of education and in war work. Another noted member of the Syracuse chapter was Frances E. Willard.

In 1871 the second chapter (Beta) was founded at Northwestern University, and since then then 35 chapters have been added, the last being Beta Nu, installed at Duke University, Durham, N. C. The fraternity became international with the founding of two chapters in Canada. In addition to the 37 active chapters (the one at Barnard College, N. Y., having become inactive when fraternities were abolished there), Alpha Phi now has 47 alumnae chapters and 21 alumnae clubs.

Local Chapter Organized in 1932

The Washington Alumnae chapter was first organized as a club holding its initial meeting May 26, 1932, under the presidency of Dale Wynn. On April 9, 1935, it received its charter as an alumnae chapter. Presidents since 1932 have been Mrs. M. L. Gillfillan, Mrs. George Benson, Mrs. Powell Lum, Minna Gill and Mrs. Laughlin.

The local sorority, Alpha Sigma Chi, of American University, soon to become Beta XI of Alpha Phi International, was created in the fall of 1936 by the merging of Alpha Chi and the Swagger Club, two groups founded in 1928 and the first social organizations on the university campus. Members have been distinguished in literary and dramatic activities, debate, art and sports, as well as in campus government Acceptance of this group's petition in June, 1937, was followed by the pledging of 18 members. These pledges, together with others to be pledged this fall, will be initiated at the time of the installation of the new chapter. Installation on October 2 will be followed by a reception October 3.

Committee members arranging the installation, are: Location, Mrs. Pat O'Leary, Mrs. W. B. Hardy, Mrs. M. L. Gillfillan; housing, Gladys Fielding, Brownley Leesnitzer, Mrs. Norman Rogers; initiation equipment, Hazel Neilson, Mrs. H. A. Taylor, Mrs. Harold Morrison; pledging, Mrs. Laughlin, Mrs. Harry Jones; banquet, Mrs. M. L. Gillfillan, Mrs. Jones, Miss Leesnitzer, Mrs. James Wells, Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, Helen Wilson; reception, Rosa Wingate, Mrs. Gordon Rath, Mrs. Philip Peck, Bonita Finney, Mrs. John Fleming; publicity, Mrs. George Benson, Mrs. O'Leary, Mrs. R. Weiner; finances, Ellen Overlock, Edna Montgomery, Mrs. Walter J. Smith.

Scholarship Fund Chief Activity

Alpha Phi early decided to give financial assistance to students. The Clara Bradley Burdette Scholarship Fund was established, through which loans are available to assist junior and senior students in completing their education. With the dual purpose of aiding students and of helping new chapters to become established, scholarships are given to graduate and senior students under the coorganizer plan, the recipients of the scholarships taking up their work at schools where there is a new chapter, or an older chapter in need of advice and assistance.

Alpha Phi was the first woman's fraternity to build and occupy a chapter house, the corner stone of the chapter house at Syracuse University having been laid in 1886. This pioneer work has been followed up in many lines: Alpha Phi was the first to have a system of visiting delegates to supervise and assist the various chapters, and the first to have an endowment fund of $50,000, thus placing the fraternity on a steady financial basis; the first intersorority conference was also called in 1902 by Alpha Phi. This conference, at which representatives attended from Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Gamma Phi Beta, Delta Gamma and Delta Delta Delta, was the forerunner of the National Panhellenic Congress established in 1911.

The Alpha Phi Quarterly, fraternity magazine, first appeared in 1888, and has been published continuously ever since. Alpha Phi has held biennial conventions since 1882, with the exception of 1918, when the convention funds were used for war work.

MISS MARION E. MARTIN.

New Director of Women's Work for G. O. P. National Committee Gives Dinner at Carlton Hotel for Members of Executive Board.

Miss Marion E. Martin, recently appointed director of women's activities for the Republican National Committee, ended a brief stay in the city last night by giving a dinner party at the Carlton Hotel for women members of the national executive committee.

She will leave today for her home in Bangor, Me., but plans to return here about October 1, when she will officially assume her new position.

Guests at the dinner last night included Mrs. Horace H. Sayre, of Ardmore, Okla.; Mrs. Worthington Scranton, who came yesterday from her home in Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. John E. Hillman, of Colorado, and Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, of Rhode Island.

Women's activities have the form of the regular Republican organization, and it is her job to co-ordinate the independent groups, such as the Republican Women's Clubs and the Business Women's League, and see that there is no functional duplication.

As a member of Maine's State legislature, Miss Martin's principal interest is "good government." She is chairman of the legal affairs committee, which during the last session of the legislature undertook to reorganize town and city governments. As chairman, Miss Martin was also responsible for the passage of a new civil service bill.

Since Maine legislative sessions are biennial, Miss Martin will make her headquarters here. During her brief stay in the Capital this month, she has been extensively entertained.

Black Inquiry 'Impertinence,' SaysCummings

Says Other Justices Not Investigated by Justice Bureau.

said. "While I have not examined tht records, I would be very much surprised if Justice Stone, Attorney General at the time, investigated himself prior to his appointment."

He added that this is "especially true in the case of a member of the Senate, whose colleagues are thoroughly acquainted with his qualifications, personality, affiliations and character."

Nation-wide discussions of Black's eligibility continued to rage. In Worcester, Mass., Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said the appointee was elevated to the court "by deception." In Lincoln, Nebr., Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, declared membership in the Klan does not disqualify a man for the court, although he is opposed to the Klan, as such.

"The only objection I had to the appointment of Senator Black is that he was needed in the Senate as much as he is needed on the court," said Norris. "I wish that the President had looked elsewhere for a justice."

Fort Is Silent.

As the Attorney General cited precedents for his department's failure to investigate Black, William E. Fort, one of Cummings' special assistants, and a former law partner of the Alabaman's, declined to confirm or deny reports that he may have information as to Black's alleged Klan affiliations.

"Mr. Black is on his way home," said Fort, "and I am sure that any statement he makes on his arrival will be the truth."

Fort was charged in a newspaper story with being a member with Black, of Robert E. Lee Klan, No. 1, of Birmingham, Ala. He said he would leave it up to Black to say whether they both had been Klan members.

Were Law Partners.

Cummings also declined to discuss the report. The Attorney General said he had not talked with Fort in more than a year. He said "it's a fair bet" that he would talk to Fort when he could "get around to it."

Fort and Black were law partners in Birmingham for two years, beginning October 1, 1925. He has been a member of Cummings own staff since August 1, 1933, and is now serving in the Criminal Division of the Justice Department. He has worked on the kidnaping case of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, a gold hoarding case and the TVA cases.

In demanding Senate hearings on Black's eligibility, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, had declared there were "two men in Washington" who had first hand knowledge of Black's alleged Klan connections.

Refuses Opinion.

At the Attorney General's press conference, Cummings answered some questions directly, parried others. He would not express an opinion on whether membership in the Klan would disqualify a member of the court. Asked whether he had talked with the President since the Klan charges were preferred, he referred the inquiry back to the President.

Cummings, who early in the controversy jumped to Black's defense with a statement that his suitability was "beyond question" was asked to reconcile this with his disclosure that there has been no investigation.

"That's a reasonable question," said Cummings, "but anything I might say would be misconstrued."

Made No Inquiry.

At the outset of his conference, Cummings swiftly reiterated there had been no inquiry into Klan charges aimed at Black. He said it had frequently been stated there was no investigation prior to the time his name was sent to the Senate. Asked if there had been any since the published charges, he said: "The answer is no."

"It is not the practice of this department to make investigations into the private lives of prospective appointees to the Supreme Court, or to conduct any other investigation in reference to them," he said.

Walsh Launches Attack.

"In the case of Mr. Justice Black, no investigation was called for. Where a man has been eminent in public life and associated for years with the members of the Senate, it would be an act of impertinence to investigate his private life."

Associated Press reports from Worcester, Mass., meantime quoted Senator Walsh as saying, "Black obtained his nomination and confirmation by concealment and thereby deceived the President and his fellow Senators."

Walsh declared that Black's impeachment by Congress was "improbable." But he added he had been in touch with Senators who felt they had been "misled," and whom he expects to record themselves next session in opposition to Black's appointment "through some form of resolution."

He said the most feasible course would be for the President to "demand and obtain his resignation." He said there was another possibility that the Supreme Court might rule on Black's eligibility, not on the Klan issue, but on constitutional questions raised in the Senate's confirmation debate.

In Nebraska, Senator Norris, who was absent from the Senate when Black was confirmed, said he thought his appointment was "a wonderfully good" one.

Norris repeated that he always had been opposed to the Klan, but said "quite a few members of Congress" and 'many good people", elsewhere had been members of the organization at some time in their lives.

Klan No Bar to Him.

"If it is true that Black has been a member of the Klan and, as I understand, no longer is a member, I certainly would not oppose him for that reason," said Norris. He added, according to United Press dispatches:

"He's perfectly honest, he has unlimited courage, he's able and he is a good lawyer—but he is the people's lawyer. That's the reason for all this furor. If he had been a corporation lawyer, all of these issues would not have been raised."

Sasscer Candidacy Backed by Bruce

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 22 (AP).—Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer's announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor brought comment today from two prominent figures in the Democratic party.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, is the only other candidate who has formally announced his intention thus far.

Howard Bruce, national committeeman, said:

"Senator Sasscer has had a long experience in dealing with legislative affairs, which ought to give him a great familiarity with the problems ahead in the Governorship."

Dr. Charles H. Conley, Frederick, who received 100,000 votes in a primary battle with the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, said he had "nothing to say" about Sasscer's candidacy, and asked if this meant he intended to run again, replied "absolutely."

Nicky Will Get His 4 Giraffes; Zoo Ship Docks

will round out the best collection of wild cattle in the world, Dr. Mann believes. They are gifts of the Maharajah of Indore.

A king cobra will replace the one which died of old age in Zoo Park a couple of years ago. Also in the freighter's hold are four great pythons, over 16 feet in length, as well as a number of other snakes.

The wild cargo, largest and most valuable ever to be consigned to National Zoological Park, includes Harry, the 7-month-old Sumatran tiger brought up on a bottle almost from birth; a bevy of pigtail macaque monkeys which are trained to climb trees and throw down cocoanuts; a pair of blue sheep, never before seen in the United States; a pair of anoas, smallest of buffalo, and species of fowl that lay eggs one-third their body weight. But you ain't heard nothing yet.

Hundreds of Beasts Aboard.

Bound for Washington — the ruminants, which includes the wild cattle and giraffes, will be quarantined 15 days in New York but all other specimens will be shipped to the Capital by train immediately upon debarcation—are 19 Birds of Paradise, one of the most valuable of winged creatures; a Sumatran wild dog, very rare; brilliantly colored lory birds from Celebes; Siamese gibbons, the giant squirrel of Java, cassowaries from Australia—indeed, it would take reams to enumerate and describe the hundreds of odd mammals, reptiles and birds aboard the steam-driven ark.

The expedition, which got under way last January, began the homeward voyage August 5, at Singapore. All went well until the Silverash reached Bombay, when she ran into a southwest monsoon lasting 14 days.

Entering the Red Sea the animal odyssey encountered heat of sufficient intensity to prostrate monkeys and bears.

Warship Encountered.

Informed by wireless of damage being wreaked by pirate submarines upon merchantmen in the Mediterranean, the Silverash plowed through that sea with her lifeboats swung out from the davits.

At one time the vessel made a wide detour after learning that there was a mine in the vicinity. One of the biggest scares of the entire voyage came one night when crew and passengers suddenly and without notice found themselves bathed in the glare of searchlights on an unidentified warship. The fighting ship, her guns trained on the freighter, circled about for a thorough inspection as a member of the Silverash crew hurriedly hoisted the British flag. Then, just as mysteriously as she had appeared, the grim phantom raced away into the night.

On leaving the Gulf Stream, the temperature dropped sharply and Dr. Mann, anxious over the giraffes' sensitive throats, had the ship's electrician rig up a 500-watt electric light for each of the four cages.

The storm which struck two nights ago tore the tarpaulins off the giraffe cages and though they were well lashed, the cages were sliding 3 feet in either direction. The ship hove to three and a half hours while all was made secure again.

Last emergency of the journey up to Halifax was a banana shortage, which resulted in a wireless being sent to this port to have a supply ready upon arrival. Five stalks were placed in the motor launch which took this correspondent, other newspapermen and representatives of the National Geographic Society out to meet the Silverash at the entrance to Halifax Harbor.

With Dr. Mann are his wife, Lucille Q. Mann; Roy Jennier, the Zoo's snake and mammal expert, who had tamed Harry, the tiger, with bottled milk; Malcolm Davis, the Zoo's bird curator, and 90-pound Lyang Gaddi, of Borneo, safari guide to King Leopold of the Belgians and other members of royalty, who was of such invaluable assistance in the jungle that Dr. Mann hired him to help see the animals through to their destination.

The collection is representative of 16 regions and countries, from Australia to Egypt. It will give Washington's Zoo 7 species of animals never before exhibited there and as many more which, Dr. Mann believes, will be unique among American zoos.

Six to Face Trial In Sale of $500,000 Gold Mine Stocks

Erie, Pa., Sept. 22 (AP).—The Federal grand jury indicted six men today on charges growing out of what Assistant U. S. Attorney Stanley Granger said was the defrauding of approximately $500,000 from 11 Pittsburgh residents.

The indictments charged the men with violating the Federal Securities Exchange act of 1933 in gold mine stock sales. Granger said they "boosted" the price of 80,000 shares of mining stock from 30 cents a share to prices varying from $1 to $6 a share by "over the counter manipulation."

127 YEARS OF Quality —AND BOTTLED IN BOND

The green stamp over the neck of an Old Overholt bottle tells you it's bottled in bond under U.S. Government supervision, strictest standard in the world.

But that's only one reason for the popularity of this great, Pennsylvania straight rye. It has a taste all its own—a taste so sturdy, full-bodied and mellow you can use less of it in a drink and still have its keen flavor "come through."

"Different as day and night" is what its friends call it—and their approval has made it the fastest-selling U. S. bottled in bond whiskey.

ARE YOU ONLY A THREE-QUARTER WIFE?

THERE are certain things a woman has to put up with and be a good sport.

Men, because they are men, can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is all love and kindness three weeks in a month and a hell cat the rest of the time.

No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through." Adv.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

Potomac paradoxes: Sometimes it takes a government expert 6 weeks to see his own boss, when any nuisance with a letter from a Member of Congress can see him in 10 minutes. . . . Homegrown hostesses behave a bit hoity-toity about Senators, but you should see them gush when they meet one. . . . Americans seem to think all the clerks at the embassies are counts, lords or barons.

• • • •

Capital caprices: Over the highballs everyone seems to know how the Congressmen should vote—except the Congressmen . . . Half the official ladies in town spend their time house-hunting or making afternoon calls to see other people's houses . . . . Foreigners make quite a rite of mixing an American highball.

• • • •

Diplomatic didoes: Most of the Embassy men speak with an English accent . . . . Their conversation is as amusing geographically as a Peter Fleming travel book—right off the map; they've been around. . . . Their ladies have a dreadful time rating the wives of American officials socially; official rankings are so deceptive.

"—like a take-off to Mars"

Star-spangled scenes: The plaza around the Washington Monument is as animated as if it were the take-off for Mars . . . . About the eastern esplanade of the Capitol there's always a bit of an air of a county fair . . . . Even at the smartest public spots the democratic dowager type or the Main Street grand dame sets the pitch or density for the atmosphere.

• • • •

Gilt Off the Dome: Even the most hardened Member will interrupt a good poker game to cast an important vote—unless he's holding a full house or better . . . Members occasionally ask each other on which side of the question the Gentleman is speaking . . . The Members from Dixie can out-orate the Yankees by about five lengths.

• • • •

KNOTS IN THE RED TAPE: In some Government bureaus the stenographers must make seven or eight copies of every letter, so no one will be overlooked . . . Some Federal workers wrinkle their brows before they can remember the name of the office they work in, as in Farm Security nee Resettlement Administration . . . In their more spiteful moments of envy the noncivil service workers like to say their luckier brethren with civil service status crawl in and out of the woodwork.

• • • •

Queens of the Capital: The New Deal ladies are almost all more conservative than their husbands . . . . The top layer of government families pays $300 or more a month in rent . . . . up to as high as $15,000. . . . And a girl whose grocery bill back home was a lavish $85 a month gets the jitters when no matter how she scrimps it keeps sticking its ugly head above the $125 mark.

"—but the king was naked"

Seats of the Mighty: Most of the new dealers strike some of their friends as too radical, others as too reactionary . . . . Washington must have been the scene of the fairy tale in which a traveling magician weaves the king some invisible raiment, which his courtiers tell him looks swell, until a court fool shrills out "The king is naked!"

Echoes from the Hinterland: A Member of Congress who went home filled to the brim with Supreme Court, Wages & Hours and Low Cost Housing writes that the serious doings of Congress rate as a conversational topic a notch below what good movies are in town . . . . An influential citizen whose congressman did him a big favor by sending him the Congressional Record free has now asked if he can't get instead a sort of "readers digest" of the Record.

• • • •

Literary footnotes: After all, John L. Lewis shouldn't rebuke the President for using the "plague on both your houses" phrase about the labor situation—Walter Lippmann used it several weeks before in the same connection, and Shakespeare used it long before that . . . . After 1940 President Roosevelt should turn out the best columns and articles ever written by an ex-President—his literary style ranks up near Washington's and Lincoln's, but punchier. . . . Good caption for his column: "My Friends—"

. . . At Secretary Wallace's press conference yesterday a journalist tried to ask him a rather embarrassing question about the price of September corn.

"Did you say September Morn?" parried the Secretary.

Post Staff Photos.

Wilson Teachers College upperclassmen honored the freshmen yesterday by giving them a picnic at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir, an unheard of thing for college juniors and seniors, but it won't happen again this year. The title of "Miss Freshman" went to Miss Caryl Loggins (left) in a beauty contest that followed lunch, at which Marvis Gee, Mary Jane Frazier and Ina Griese formed a typical group (center). The sunshine of a perfect September day and Doris Burr on a seesaw gave the photographer another pretty picture (right).

Any academic worries which Wilson Teachers College freshmen have accumulated during their first four days of classes were forgotten yesterday when they attended a picnic held in their honor by upperclassmen. It's the one occasion when the first-year students must be treated with deference by their elders, and they made the most of it.

Over 600 students in all attended the affair, and even a few faculty members dropped in at the picnic grounds near the Sixteenth street reservoir. About 150 freshmen were there, easily recognizable by their green caps or hair ribbons, their prominent name tags and black ties.

Uncrowned queen of the picnic was Miss Caryl Loggins, who was chosen "Miss Freshman" in the beauty contest which followed the lunch. Runners-up for the title were Misses Marianne Clark, Janet Grimm, Eileen Thornton, Frances Dewey, Betty Barringer and Talmah McConchie.

A lemonade stand furnished refreshment for participants and spectators at the athletic events.

The freshmen engaged in a foot race, and a softball game between freshmen and upper-class teams was played. The game, according to the upper-class spokesman, was won by their team, but nobody remembered who won the foot race.

Another feature of the athletic program was an informal football game. The girls restricted themselves to sliding boards, swings and seesaws.

The afternoon ended with a scavenger hunt, in the course of which all 600 students scurried, around the park looking for 1928 pennies, oyster shells, bits of quartz and cork stoppers. Miss Marguerite Cook, '40, and Louis Waple, '39, winners of the hunt, received credit at the college book shop as prizes.

Judges in the beauty contest were Dr. Albert House, Dr. Paul Carr and Dr. Henry Olson, all of the faculty; John Koontz, president of the men's club; Eldridge Turner, president of the college council; S. Frank Gordon, president of the W Club, athletic letter society, and John F. Hamaker, of the college council. The picnic was arranged by the council, which is the student government body.

ABC License Plea Pressed By Palmisano

Representative Vincent Palmisano, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday called on members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board with regard to the protested application of Leo V. Rossiter for a liquor license at 4132 Georgia avenue.

The case was suspended indefinitely recently after civic spokesmen and teachers complained the liquor shop would be in the vicinity of three schools—Macfarland Junior High, Roosevelt Senior High and Petworth Elementary School.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the A. B. C. board, admitted the Rossiter case was discussed but insisted Palmisano frequently calls at the A. B. C. offices. Offutt said the case had never been closed by the board.

Palmisano previously had written to the A. B. C. board in behalf of Rossiter. Yesterday he carried a file of correspondence with regard to the case when he went to the District Building.

The House District Committee chairman earlier had agreed with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen that the proposal of the National Resources Committee for expanding the metropolitan area of the National Capital is "fantastic and unworkable."

Predicting "complete failure" for the plan, Palmisano said neither Maryland nor Virginia Legislatures would cede State territory to the Federal Government for enlarging the District. He added that the plan would lead to "all sorts of complications," particularly in connection with fiscal questions.

Police Shifts Made At White House

Alpheus Walter, policeman guarding the White House since 1917, has been promoted to lieutenant of White House police, replacing Ernest E. Seaman, who resigned to accept a position with a bank.

Walter, a sergeant on the White House force since 1922, will guard the entrance to the executive offices. He lives at 510 Third street southeast.

Other changes, announced by Capt. C. L. Dalrymple, commander, include: Virgil M. Costello, formerly acting sergeant, succeeds Walter; Private Ole Jacobson succeeds Costello as acting sergeant. B. M. Bowles and Arley L. Keith, detailed from the Metropolitan force, have been assigned for duty in the executive office lobby. Changes are effective October 1.

U. S. May Lift Big Transport Ban at Airport

Short Runway Now Barred to Heavy Ships; Roper Names Committee.

The Bureau of Air Commerce is in a mood to reconsider restrictions on the use of Washington Airport by heavy transport planes at a conference announced for October 7 by Fred D. Fagg, director of the bureau, it developed yesterday.

Pressure from line operators and some pilots of Eastern Air Lines for liberalization of regulations prohibiting planes weighing more than 15,000 pounds from using the short runway, was believed responsible for the Bureau's decision. On the other hand, the majority of transport pilots are demanding more stringent restriction of landings and takeoffs.

Committee Designated.

Meanwhile Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper announced designation of the interdepartmental committee on aviation legislation, a move that is expected to have a far-reaching effect on the future of commercial aviation throughout the country.

The committee appointed by Secretary Roper at the request of President Roosevelt will be composed of R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department; Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War; Stephen B. Gibbons, assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General; Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. It will select its own chairman.

To Spend $376,000.

Formulation of a permanent air policy for the United States and analysis of aviation legislation now on the statute books, including a pending measure to place air regulation under the Interstate Commerce Commission, are some of the tasks to be undertaken by the committee, Roper said.

Roper announced that approximately $376,000 will be spent for airway aids on the route between Washington and Cincinnati as a part of a $7,000,000 program of airways modernization and improvement. Lack of funds immediately available, Roper said, will delay installation of simultaneous radio range and radio telephone facilities here for at least two years.

Plea Made for School Lunches For 8,000 in Hunger's Shadow

Leader Broadcasts Appeal for Funds to Conduct Work Abandoned in WPA Economy; Drive Opens Today.

Making a strong plea against "the spectacle of hungry children . . . in a land of plenty," a campaign to raise $100,000 to provide free lunches for Washington school children was launched yesterday by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., leader of a similar movement in 1933.

Over radio station WMAL, Mrs. Boyle appealed for contributions from all citizens to supply the funds for lunches previously provided by the WPA, but cutailed under economy moves. She also outlined the fund-raising campaign, which will open formally at the Willard Hotel this morning at 11 a. m.

"The spectacle of hungry children in a land over which the dismal shadow of famine hovers, is not a pretty one. But that of hungry children in a land of plenty is too horrible even to contemplate.

"And Washington is a land of plenty."

Mrs. Boyle referred to the first gift, announced two days ago, of $3,000 from Opportunity House, a settlement house at 915 New Jersey avenue.

The goal, she continued, is $100,000 for food alone; 10 trucks are required for transportation. WPA workers have already been arranged for to prepare and handle the food.

She said social workers had learned that the free lunches often were the only substantial meals for many children.

Mrs. Boyle estimated that at least 8,000 school children "are carrying on in the shadow of hunger."

Capital Police Use Ice Cream, Suasion On Two Lost Babies

There's a difference in children, and it's a good thing policemen understand it. For instance:

Two children, aged 3, wandered away from their homes yesterday. All that was required to encourage the return of blond, curly haired Joseph Cunningham to mother, Mrs. Grace Cunningham, and home, 468 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was a kind word or two from the policeman who found him sitting on a curbstone.

None of the amenities would suffice for Nancy MacDonald, 2003 First street northwest, who "got losted" at Rhode Island avenue and North Capitol street. She refused to reveal her name, and for some time sterner business was put aside while officers at the Twelfth Precinct Station sought to change her mind. Finally some one thought of an ice cream cone. That worked.

Search Fails for Kin Of Man Who Died Here

Police last night had been unable to locate Baltimore relatives of Charles Neurath, 67, night elevator operator at 1869 Wyoming avenue, who died late Tuesday.

Mr. Neurath collapsed on the front steps of 1722 Euclid street, residence of Mrs. C. P. Fletcher. He was found dead on arrival of an Emergency Hospital physician summoned by police.

Hero of Panic at D. C. Circus To Leave Police Department

Det. Sergt. Benjamin H. Johnson Retires at 62; Tried to Halt Stampede in Storm; Solver of Roosevelt Case Promoted.

Detective Sergt. Benjamin H. Johnson, hero of the Ringling circus panic about a year ago, will be retired from the police department Friday at his own request, it was learned by The Post last night.

The 62-year-old police veteran who was injured trying to halt the panic that followed the uprooting of the main circus tent during a violent storm, has been in ill health for nearly a year.

Johnson has been a member of the department for 36 years. He has been commended many times for distinguished service, and his bravery when the terror-stricken crowd stampeded, drew the praise of Maj. Brown.

The vancancy left by Johnson will be filled by Precenct Detective George Thorton of the Ninth Precinct, who will be promoted to the rank of detective sergeant.

At the same time the department will take the opportunity to reward the work of Private H. H. Carper of the Seventh Precinct, in "breaking" the James Roosevelt burglary. Carper will be raised to precenct detective.

Johnson was appointed to the department July 1, 1901, and reached his present rank in 1930 when he was assigned to the clothing squad. He lives at 737 Taylor street northwest.

Thornton who lives at 3302 Twentieth street northeast, will recieve a pay raise of $360 a year while Carper whose home is at Arlington, Va., will get an additional annual salary of $240.

'Pocketbook' Trick Takes $800 From Latest D. C. Victim

If Rose Gold, of 917 Sixth street northwest, feels like kicking herself because she permitted two colored women to bilk her of $800 yesterday she has the consolation of knowing a lot of Washingtonians have felt the same way this year.

It was the old lost-pocketbook trick that got Mrs. Gold, worked in the standard and approved manner:

The women are arguing on a street corner over disposition of the contents of the lost pocketbook and the victim is permitted to overhear them. They offer to split if she will put a sum of money—in this case, $800—with the "find." The victim usually withdraws the money from a savings account, turns it over to the disputatious pair and is permitted to keep, while the swindlers keep an "important appointment, a bulging pocketbook which, it later develops, is packed with paper.

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1937 X*

This Morning

Shades of Merkle as Cubs, Giants Clash.

By Shirley Povich.

Somehow, it seems entirely meet and proper that if two teams are fighting down the stretch for the National League pennant those two teams ought to be the Cubs and the Giants. Because the goings-on at Chicago this week serve to recreate one of the most romantic chapters of baseball.

POVICH.

In case you forget, it was 29 years ago this afternoon that the Cubs and Giants took the field at the Polo Grounds in a similar crucial series for the league pennant. And that game—on September 23, 1908—produced perhaps the most famous incident in all baseball history—Fred Merkle's famed "boner."

* * * *

Frank Chance's Cubs had moved into New York the day before in second place, 2½ games behind McGraw's Giants and faced elimination from the pennant race unless they could sweep the three-game series. They played a double-header on September 22 and left the Giants in panic by taking both games, 4 to 3 and 3 to 1.

* * * *

Mordecal Brown had pitched the Cubs to both of those victories, but the late John McGraw had not yet started his ace, Christy Mathewson, in the series. Mathewson he saved for that September 23 game and before a mob of fans who stormed the Polo Grounds, Mathewson took the mound to stave off the rush of the Cubs.

* * * *

Pfiester, on the mound for the Cubs, was giving the great Mathewson a brilliant battle of it, even outpitching him as the game wore into the ninth inning with the two clubs tied at 1 to 1. Then evolved the most uproarious inning in all baseball history, producing as it did the play that stamped Fred Merkle as the supreme goat of the big leagues.

* * * *

Cy Seymour was first up for the Giants in that ninth inning and Johnny Evers threw him out at first base. But Arthur Devlin found Pfiester for a single to stir Giant hopes anew. Moose McCormick forced Devlin at second, Evers to Tinker, for the second out, and little Tinker, it seems, didn't like the way Devlin slid into the bag. Anyway, he punched big Devlin full in the mouth. There was time out while peace was restored.

* * * *

Merkle then made a bid for heroism with a sharp single to rightfield that sent McCormick scurring to third and a hit at this point would win the game for the Giants. But, paradoxically, Bridwell, the Giants' shortstop, produced the hit and the Giants did not win. Because——

* * * *

Whereas McCormick scored from third base, Merle took one brief look at Bridwell's hit falling safely in centerfield and then made a beeline for the clubhouse without the formality of touching second base. Then it was that quick thinking Johnny Evers saved the game and the pennant for the Cubs.

* * * *

Evers, calling for Outfielder Hocman to toss in the ball, brought to Umpire Emslie's attention the fact that Merkle had never touched second base, thus nullifying McCormick's run. Then, the Giants, suddenly aware of what Evers was attempting, swung into action.

* * * *

After Evers had gotten the ball from Hoffman and started toward second base to touch the bag, "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, of the Giants, leaped on him and wrestled the ball away. Other Giants chased after Merkle to bring him back from the clubhouse before Evers could touch the bag with the ball and fans and police joined in the free-for-all.

* * * *

Evers and two other Cubs then attacked McGinnity in an effort to recover the ball, but McGinnity settled that issue very simply by throwing the thing over the left-field bleachers and out of the park. Umpires Emslie and O'Day were helpless in the mob and the fans left the park under the impression that the Giants had won, 2-1.

* * * *

But the next day, hearing the Cubs' protest, President Harry Pulliam of the National League declared that the game was a 1-1 tie, that McCormick's run had not counted and that the fans on the field had prevented a resumption of the game. The Giants squawked long and loud, even threatening to quit the league, but Pulliam's decision stuck.

* * * *

And so, eventually, the race narrowed down to the last day of the season with the pennant hinging on a play-off between the Cubs and Giants. Again the Polo Grounds was the scene. Again it was Mathewson for the Giants and Phiester for the Cubs. Feeling between the two teams was high, tempers were short...Big Iron Man McGinnity stood at home plate with his bat and attempted to prevent the Cubs from taking their pre-game batting practice. The police shooed him away.

* * * *

Well, they beat Mathewson again that day, you remember, by 4 to 2, with Phiester and Mordecai Brown holding the Giants to five hits, and the Cubs were to find as their opponents in the world series Hughie Jennings' Tigers, who were winning the American League pennant from Chicago that day because a young fellow named Ty Cobb was making Walsh, one of 'em a terrific three-hagger.

Giants Top Cubs, 6 to 0; Add to Lead

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Before a record crowd of 41,875, the New York Giants today rocketed back to their 2½-game National League lead as Lanky Cliff Melton shut out the Cubs, 6 to 0, in the second contest of their crucial three-game series.

Melton, taming the Bruins with 6 hits while the Giants were bagging 13 off three Chicago pitchers, had a no-hitter for four innings.

The Cubs made their strongest threat in the fifth. Gabby Hartnett, hero of yesterday's Cub victory, led off with a single, but was out trying for second. Ripper Collins and Phil Cavarretta followed with one-base blows, but Melton then retired Augie Galan on a foul and Billy Jurges on a grounder.

The Giants, scoring one run each in the second, fourth and eighth off Tex Carleton, put the game on ice with three more in the ninth off Clay Bryant and Bob Logan.

After Bryant, going to the mound after Carleton had been lifted for a pinch hitter, had got Melton on a grounder, Joe Moore followed up with a double. On the play Cavarretta and Billy Herman collided, with the former being knocked out momentarily.

Another double by Dick Bartell and a single by Mel Ott was the sign for Bryant's departure, Jimmy Ripple and Johnny McCarthy sending home the last two runs with singles off Logan.

The crowd set a season's record for Wrigley Field. The teams will play the finale in their three-game series tomorrow, the finale also of the Giants' last Western trip, on which so far they have won seven and lost three.

Champions Ready To Defend Crowns

By Jack Paulus.
Sports Editor of The Post.

New York, Sept. 22.—The greatest collection of ring champions and their challengers in the history of the venerable old business of beak busting will gather at the New York Athletic Commission's offices here at 11:30 tomorrow morning to weigh in for Mike Jacob's Carnival of Champions, a four-ring fistic circus scheduled for the lone squared circle of the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

The greatest collection of World War veterans since the boys marched down Fifth avenue in 1917 singing "Over There" is expected to pack the home of the Giants to a figure roughly predicted at between 50,000 and 70,000.

The greatest brain in the boxing business since Tex Rickard—Uncle Mike Jacobs, the Sahib of Sixth avenue—will risk his reputation as a phenomenal promoter and some $200,000 in guarantees to stage this unprecedented spectacle of four champions defending their titles in the same ring within the space of two or three hours.

New York Daffy.

This is the setting as Little Old New York goes mildly daffy over a spectacle of brawn the like of which have never graced the festive boards of even anything as daffy and unpredictable as an American Legion convention. An advance sale of $250,000 was announced tonight by Jacobs' Hippodrome Theater offices despite a period of inactivity because of Legion congestion in midtown streets. Jacobs predicted an attendance of 60,000 and receipts well over $400,000. The House of Charity Cancer Hospital is to get a percentage of the profits of the show.

Jack Doyle, the Broadway betting oracle, last night quoted Ambers and Montanez as even-money betting propositions, the odds being 4 to 5 and take your pick. Ross was quoted at 2 to 5 over Garcia, Apostoli the same price over Thil, and Sixto Escobar 1 to 2 over Jeffra.

As the hour approached for the four title defenses, both champions and challengers moved nearer the battlegrounds to complete training. Barney Ross, welterweight king, in the best condition of his career, worked out at Stillman's gym yesterday and today. Veteran ring followers who had seen Ross in action in previous fights predicted dire things for Ceferino Garcia, the Filipino challenger.

No Injuries.

Harry Jeffra, the Baltimore bantamweight who is to meet Sixto Escobar for the 118-pound crown, closed his training here today in a three-round sparring workout at Stillman's against Katsuma Marioka, a Japanese boxer.

The other boxers on the card, champions and challengers, are due in tomorrow morning in time for the weighing in ceremonies. No injuries were suffered by any of the principals with not a cut, bruise or sprain reported.

Pedro Montanez is the white-haired boy of the card, an almost unanimous choice among the experts to nail Lou Ambers. The fact that Pedro has never in his fighting career stepped a distance longer than 10 rounds is overlooked by the same boys who picked Louis to kayo Farr in the first three rounds. Montanez' 10-round verdict over the champion, plus a chronic bad hand that Ambers is reason for the swing to the Peurto supposed to have is obviously the Rican.

Ambers will be pitting his years of experience, his peculiar jumping-jack style and a good quantity of ring brains against the one lone asset on the challenger's side of the ledger—a devastating right.

Father and Son.

A grinning pug-nosed, bald-headed Puck, Marcel Thil, middleweight champion of the world in most quarters, will be unveiled, at long last, and will carry the prestige of La Bonne France and some 10 extra years into the ring against Freddie Apostoli, the Pacific Coast challenger.

Thil, 33, and Apostoli, 23, are the father and son combination on the card with the experts, fearing another Farr episode, stringing about 50-50 on this one. The likeable Frenchman was unveiled at the Louis-Farr fight last month. ' Since

Flag Is Near As Yankees Win Twice

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 22.—By sweeping their double-header with the St. Louis Browns today behind fine pitching performances by Monte Pearson and Kemp Wicker, the Yankees virtually clinched their second successive American League pennant.

Even if the second-place Detroit Tigers should win all of their remaining 11 games while the Yanks were losing all 12 of theirs the best the Tigers could get would be a tie. In that event the final standings would be:

Club.	Won	Lost	Pct.
Yankees.....	96	58	.623
Tigers.....	96	58	.623

One defeat for Detroit or one victory for the New Yorkers will insure the pennant for the 1936 world champions.

Pearson today held the last-place Browns to seven hits for a 4-1 victory in the opening game, while Wicker, winning his sixth decision of the year, shut them out by a similar number as the Yanks pounded out 15 safeties for an 11-0 triumph in the nightcap.

The champions were held to three hits by Jack Knott and Julio Bonetti in the first encounter, but all of them were for extra bases and one was a home run by Tony Lazzeri, his thirteenth, with a man on base in the sixth.

Eighth Inning Rally By Losers Is Futile

De Shong Wobbly Near End, Allows Only Two Hits in Seven Innings; Wins 14th Victory; Mel Harder Victim.

By Shirley Povich.

Now the Indians know how Custer felt about it. Jimmy DeShong surprised 'em yesterday—surprised 'em with a well-pitched ball game and ushered the Nats to a 6-4 vitory at Griffith Stadium.

DeShong's winning efforts on the mound have been none too frequent in recent weeks: in fact it was being noised around the league that DeShong was a soft touch these days, but yesterday to the great amazement of the Indians he was unbeatable for seven innings. And in the eighth, well, he saw the thing through and emerged with a six-hit performance to his credit.

Indeed, if it were permissible to toss out that eighth inning DeShong's performance would have been downright sensational because up to that point he was pitching two-hit ball and giving up no runs at all. He finished that eighth in a stagger, though, finally calling a halt after the Indians had cuffed him around for four hits and all of their four runs.

By that time, though, DeShong had a nice 6-0 lead. With the help of Third Baseman Odell Hale, who was sabotaging the Indians cause with two damaging errors, the Washington athletes stirred up a run against Mel Harder in the first inning, another in the fourth and put over a four-run haymaker in the fifth.

It was just as well that the Nats found Harder for nine hits because from the start of the sixth until the finish, they didn't even get to first base against the left-handed stuff that Earl Whitehill served up.

That run the Nats picked up in the first inning was plenty unearned. Almada's infield single started the Nats off and with one out, Hale booted Travis' grounder to put Almeda in scoring position from which Johnny Stone promptly scored him with a single to left. In the third, three straight singles by Stone, Jimmy Wasdell and young George Case upped the Nats lead to 2-0.

Mel Almada's single to center launched the luscious fifth-inning proceedings for the Nats and then Buddy Lewis complained to Umpire Brick Owen that he had been hit on the foot by a pitch. Owen refused to let him take his base until he looked at Lewis' shoe. What evidence he found that Lewis was hit is debatable, but he waved Lewis to first. Then the Indians squawked, but Owen held his ground and the Nats had two on and none out.

Then Cecil Travis bunted safely and Hale threw the ball into Box 67-A, beyond first base, Almada scoring, and Lewis moving to third. Stone walked to fill the bases and Lewis scored on Wasdell's force-out. The rookies Case and Bloodworth drove in the other two runs of the inning with nicely tagged singles to left.

The only guys to get a hit off DeShong for seven innings were Trosky, who doubled to center in the second, and Solters, who singled to center in the sixth. Then Lary led off the eighth with a single to right and the onslaught was on.

Roy Hughes delivered a single to center and so did Earl Averill. Trosky walked and the Indians had the bases full, none out and one run across. Solters sent Almada to the fence for his long f · and produced a second run. Campbell slashed a two-bagger to left and the Indians had four runs for the inning. With Krakauskas warming up feverishly in the bullpen, DeShong finally called a halt.

He came back fresh for the ninth and the Indians were a gone gang.

Briton Tunes Car For Tryout Mark

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 22 (AP).—Capt. George E. T. Eyston, 40-year-old British speedster, sent his "Speed of the Wind" roaring over the Bonneville Salt Flats today, tuning up for an assault Friday on Ab Jenkins' many land speed records.

Eyston wheeled his racing car onto the flats when Jenkins abruptly halted a record-chattering run this morning. Originally scheduled to attempt to break the 48-hour record, he quit after passing the 24-hour mark with the explanation, "the course is too broken to continue."

Mrs. Amick Upsets Mrs. Hussey in Overtime Post Tourney Feature

Mrs. C. Stern, Mrs. Bullock Win Handily

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Marion Brown Also Advance.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The fifth annual Washington Post match play tournament advanced to the quarter-final round of play yesterday at Columbia with Mrs. Earl Amick of the host club defeating Mrs. G. F. Hussey, Army and Navy, in an overtime match to furnish the event with its first semblance of an upset.

Turning in a 6 and 5 victory over Miss Bernice Baker, Indian Spring, medalist Mrs. Meckley shared with Mrs. Arnold McNitt of Congressional the highest winning margin of the day, the latter defeating Mrs. Woodleaf Thomas of Kenwood on the 13th hole.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern was not extended in defeating Mrs. N. J. Waldron 4 ann 3 while Mrs. Tucker, holding a lead throughout the match, closed out Mrs. Gale E. Pugh on the seventeenth hole, 3 and 1.

Other winners included Mrs. F. D Letts 4 and 3 winner over Mrs. C. A. Stewart, Miss Marion Brown, who won by a 2 and 1 margin over Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, and Mrs. J. H. Bullock, the third Indian Spring victor, over Mrs. R. L. Rose, 2 and 1.

Holds Early Lead.

Mrs. Meckley turned in 42 against Miss Baker, holding a 4 up lead, and started back 5-5-5-3 to end the match by the 6 and 5 margin, continuing her consistent golf that strengthens her favorites role as the third day of tournament play ended.

Mrs. Stern also played the first nine in 42 strokes, against Mrs. Waldron, and held the margin through the next five holes for a 4 and 3 triumph.

Mrs. Tucker, finalist in the '36 tournament, continued her match to the advanced rounds by a 3 and 1 win playing the back nine even with Mrs. Pugh after a 3 up lead at the turn. Mrs. Stewart, who played 36 holes yesterday in an overtime match, was 5 down at the end of seven holes to Mrs. Letts and could not overcome the margin, losing 4 and 3.

Both Miss Brown and Mrs. Dowdall suffered a letdown from their fine play of Tuesday. The latter took an early lead of 2 up leaving the fourth hole but the Manor Club champion evened the match at the ninth, won 15 and 16, the latter when Mrs. Dowdall drove into the ditch, and halved the next hole to qualify for today's play.

Mrs. McNitt Wins.

The match in which Mrs. Arnold McNitt defeated Mrs. Woodleaf Thomas of Kenwood was a reversal of the decision in the identical round of the same tournament last year. Mrs. McNitt, 2 up at the ninth hole, and won the first four holes of the back nine for the victory.

In a see-saw encounter that saw the lead change hands through the match and neither hold more than a 2-up margin at any time, Mrs. J. H. Bullock won the sixteenth and seventeenth holes with 4's to record her 2 and 1 triumph over Mrs. Rose.

Mrs. Amick, who won the last hole of the morning match from Mrs. Hussey to square the issue, went on to win 4 and 3 in the regulation 18-hole overtime battle with a better brand of golf.

The low handicap players will all give strokes today to higher handicapped opponents, Mrs. Stean meeting Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Amick vs. Mrs. Letts, Miss Brown playing Mrs. Bullock and Mrs. Meckley, spotting 15, against Mrs. McNitt.

Results of yesterday's play in the championship flight and consolation, that also advanced to the quarter-final round, include:

Championship Flight.

Mrs. A. W. Tucker, Beaver Dam, 13, defeated Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, Manor, 15, 3 and 1.

Mrs. F. D. Letts, Chevy Chase, 12, defeated Mrs. C. A. Stewart, Congressional, 10, 4 and 3.

Lentz Gets 10 Backs.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 22.—Head coatch Dutch Lentz, at St. Johns, this city, smiled happily today when ten new candidates, youths who had just entered school, reported to him on the field. His smile abated greatly, however, when he found that all were backs. What Lentz could use just now are a few more stalwart forwards.

TERPS PRESENT BRAWNY LINE-UP FOR SEASON'S INAUGURAL WITH ST. JOHN'S

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—The Chicago White Sox handed the Athletics eight desolate innings today after their three first inning runs and took the game, 9 to 3.

Umpire Johnston chased Bob Johnson, Athletic left-fielder, from the game in the eighth for arguing over a called strike.

The game stood tied at three at the end of the second. Then in the third doubles by Appling, Walker and Sewell contributed a six-run lead which Thornton Lee maintained with careful pitching.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

If brawn can win 'em the burley boys of Maryland are going places on the gridiron this season and the general direction will be forward—even if the dopesters don't figure them to be among the game's elite.

A tabulation of the weight chart reveals that the Terrapins' starting line-up adds up to the tidy total of 2,013 pounds on the hoof—with not an ounce of fat in the group. And speed has not been sacrified for heft, even though they all aren't 10 second men.

Mr. William Hottel, whose business it is to ferret out such things, reduced an extra heavy duty pencil to a mere stub yesterday arriving at an average weight of 185-pounds for the linemen, and 181½ pounds for the backfield. No pushover for any team, in any league.

But Mr. Hottel, who has taken it upon himself to do the official worrying for the coaching staff, is quick to point out that Maryland isn't as big as the figures tend to show. Not quite. Take Bob Walton for example, he's a mere 164-pounds and he holds down the important post of center. Then, too, Charley Weidinger comes in at a skimpy 170, and Bob Hewitt is a paperweight of 163 pounds. The latter two are backs.

Walton Tough.

Of course, Mr. Hottel doesn't mention their respective abilities. One hundred sixty-four pounds may not be much for a center to weigh, but try wrestling with a block of granite that size and you have a fair idea of Walton's worth. Weidinger's is a passer—one of the best. He snaps his throws, a la Gomez, and who ever saw a whip that had to be heavy to sting? Hewitt, is, we grant you, untested, but he looks good in practice.

"Jumbo Jim" Meade, apparent successor to Bill Guckeyson's triple-threat shoes, is 190-pounds stripped, and a ball carrier never bumped into a sturdier safety man. Frank DeArmey, who will essay the blocking back role, is a vertiable bull, and apparently fully recovered from the effects of an operation. He's only 193, but putting on weight gradually.

Smith Tough, Too.

Blair Smith and Nick Budkoff, ends, send the arrow around to 175 and 187, respectively, and don't let that light-heavyweight poundage Smith is totin' fool you. He's a heavyweight in action and temperament. Budkoff is 187 pounds of real end.

The tackles, occupied by a couple of newcomers in Ben Brown and John DeArmey, respectively, are problem positions in the line-up, but not because of a lack of weight. Brown scales 212, and his running mate, the weaker of the two, 197. And if the lattter fails, Dobson has another 190-pounder waiting to step into the position.

At guard, Maryland is fortified at least as well as last year, possibly better, because Mike Surgent and Bill Wolfse are back again. Surgent, a 187-pounder, is heavier than his Dutch berthmate by a solitary pound.

Altogether, the Terps add up to said, 2,013 pounds—and a pretty fair first team.

Match Play Open Is Led By Thomson

Toney Manero, Guldahl, Cooper and Nelson All Close.

By the Associated Press.

Belmont, Mass., Sept. 22.—With most of his 220 rivals in or heard from, long-hitting Jimmy Thomson today appeared to have the first-day qualifying lead in the $12,000 Belmont Open match play tourney safe in his grasp with a three-under-par 68 that wiped out a 14-year-old competitive record for this long course.

Thomson, pounding hard enough to get on in two on four long holes, sank only two long putts as he put together a half-dozen birdies, which gave him a two-stroke lead on Slammin' Sam Snead, Byron Nelson and Dick Metz.

Tony Manero from nearby Salem, turned in a par 71, a performance late starting Horton Smith, Harry Cooper and Ralph Guldahl had a chance to match when they started their inward nines.

The hard-hitting Lawson Little, bracketed with Denny Shute and Snead as the pre-tourney favorites, turned in a one-over 72 as did Vic Ghezzi.

A hundred and eleven others, who ranged from 76 to 81, and the three trapped by darkness qualified for tomorrow's second round medal play, after which the field will be cut to 64 for the first round matches.

The last starters, Bud Williamson, of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Ian Robertson, of Tannersville, N. Y., and Dick Martin, of Glen Head, Long Island, will launch tomorrow's play by starting at the sixteenth tee to complete their first round.

None of the top-rankers in the star-studded field suffered elimination but Ed Dudley, Philadelphia's Ryder cup player, was near the borderline with a 79 and Tom Creavy of Albany, who once won the P. G. A. championship barely made the grade with an 81.

Marcel is a wily, ring-wise veteran who knows what to do when the going gets tough. He is in superb condition, the weight of his 33 years seeming to weigh lightly upon him. He is not rated as the world's greatest puncher, but has enough power in each hand, combined with a wisdom of many previous fights, to beat off a younger, hardier opponent.

Barney Ross is expected to come through with his crown perched jauntily on his head, despite Ceferino Garcia's vaunted "bolo" punch. He has beaten the Filipino twice and few today say that he can't do it again.

Garcia is anything but a consistent winner, having dropped several decisions between his fights with the champion. Barney puts on his greatest power when his rich title is at stake and is backed to win over Garcia tomorrow, perhaps on the strength of his condition and a grand left hook alone.

Harry Jeffra, the Baltimore challenger, has won two over the weight matches with Sixto Escobar but is rated on the short end of the wagering for tomorrow's title fight. Jeffra has had a difficult time making weight for the championship event, this fact alone being worth a great deal to the 118-pound champion. Jeffra will be strained and will find it difficult to step 15 rounds at his usual bouncing, rugged fashion.

Betting on the card has been heavy and it is said along Broadway, where most of the wagering has been done, that possibly a million dollars will change hands on the results of the bouts.

At its meeting yesterday, the State Boxing Commission approved a plan to hold the show Friday if rain upsets things tomorrow. But the board held firm to its re-weighing-in rule in championship flights. The board's rule provided for the re-weighing-in in case of 48 hours postponements.

Officials to Attend.

A large delegation of Washington fans, from official and unofficial life, will be on hand for the festivities. Among the many prominent Washingtonians on the list are United States Senator George L. Berry, Postmaster General James Farley, John Roosevelt, James Roosevelt and Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Big, blond Cliff Battles, the most deceptive thing in moleskins, will return to the Griffith Stadium gridiron tomorrow night for the first time since 1932, when he ended three years of havoc-wreaking against Georgetown football teams.

That was when Battles was the one-man football team belonging to West Virginia Wesleyan and was giving Washington fans a rare eyeful of pace changing, line cracking and sheer speed. Well, they say he's a better football player now.

He'll be in there for George Marshall's Redskins against the Chicago Cardinals tomorrow night—the most-feared ball carrier on a field that will be cluttered with former college greats now playing for dear old Alma Mazuma.

The game will mark Battles' debut before District football fans, as an infected foot prevented him from helping put the Giants to rout last week. Cliff has been working all week and is ready to strut his stuff. With he and Sammy Baugh in action the Cards will have their collective hands full combatting the Indians' attack.

Coach Ray Flaherty is jubilant over Battles' return, for with the former Bobcat ace in action the freckle-faced Irish mentor will be able to use several trick plays in which Battles is the central figure. The plays were not employed last Thursday night when the local team successfully opened its season with a 13-to-3 victory over New York.

The Cardinals were scheduled to arrive in Washington early this morning and will practice tonight at 9 o'clock at the stadium. At 7 o'clock the Redskins will go through their paces.

Speaking of All-Americans, the Chicagoans have their full share with no less than Gaynell Tinsley, a product of L. S. U., who shared premier honors with Baugh in the Pros-All-Star game, leading the list. An expert pass receiver, Tinsley will be on the receiving end for Doug Russell and Grosvenor.

Reigh Count Filly Takes The Feature

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 22.—Threadneedle tended to her knitting here today and galloped off with the Westminster Purse, a test of a mile and a sixteenth which served as feature purposes. The Reigh Count filly, a virtual stranger to the winner's circle this year, was given a rousing ride by Jockey Basil James and finished with enough speed and courage to offet closing rushes of Conquer and Kievex. With the finish line reached, Threadneedle was a length in front of her nearest rival.

A field of eight marched postward and Bootless enjoyed a brief moment in front before Threadneedle hustled into the lead. From that point to the finish line Wise Sister, Sir Jim James, Bootless and Conquer were all second, but none had what it took to match the ultimate winner.

Kievex Closes Fast

Kievex, far back for a half-mile, closed like the wind on the outside, but Jockey R. Eccard timed the move a bit late. Bright Light was away very slowly and failed to figure in the important running.

Threadneedle had little in her record to suggest that she would run away with the field and as a consequence paid a $22 mutuel. Her time was 1:46 1-5.

Those in the crowd of 8,500 who played Army Banners and Airegla, a pair of favorites, in the daily double, received a $10.40 mutuel, the smallest twin wager pay-off of the meeting to date. Both won their races with speed in reserve, Airegla having a lead of eight lengths at the end of the second event.

Basil James rode his first winner of the day aboard Mrs. J. M. Black's Joan Asbestos, a $16.50 shot and one that led throughout. Light Chatter and Swift Lad chased the winner to the wire.

Pays Big Mutuel.

Proving the first horse of the meeting to win two races, Little Shaver was victorious at an $18.90 mutuel in the fourth race. Jockey L. Turner held the Jean Valjean gelding together longest to stave off the closing rush of Evening Tide. Biologist finished third.

In a photo-finish Glittering won the seventh race. The Brilliant gelding nosed out Secret Vote with Last Romance third. The winner paid $10.40. Jockey J. Jaekle was thrown by Last Romance after the finish and suffered a broken collarbone. Sickle Bill won the sixth race at a $15.20 mutuel.

LITTLE SHAVER went to front with bold rush leaving backstretch, drew out, but faltered inside sixteenth pole and had to be hard used to stave off closing bid of EVENING TIDE. The latter was not rushed during early running, worked way up on outside and came with good speed at end. BIOLOGIST, away slowly, came through on inside at final bend and closed full of run. RAINLAND went forwardly, but weakened.

Old Westbury Poloists Win Championship

Sonny Whitney's Quartet Takes National Title From Greentree.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The "House of Whitney" still rules the U. S. Open Polo championship but Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney's Old Westbury quartet today took the honors away from Cousin John Hay (Jock) Whitney's famous Greentree combination in a surprisingly one-sided final-round match on the Meadowbrook Club's historic international field.

The final score was 11 to 6 as the hard-riding challengers ended Greentree's two-year title reign, despite anything that the great Tommy Hitchcock could do about it. Hitchcock, surviving one nasty tumble, was the outstanding star of the match but his individual prowess was unequal to checking the power thrusts delivered by Mike Phipps, Cecil Smith and Stewart Iglehart.

A crowd of 20,000 spectators witnessed a rough, hard-riding match in which Old Westbury's combined offensive and defensive tactics dominated. The challengers, a 31-goal combination, applied heavy pressure from the outset, shackled Greentree's forwards and, meantime, directed a steady fire at the opposing goal. Old Westbury's defense was good enough to blank Greentree in four of the eight chukkers while its offense, despite erratic marksmanship at close range, was good enough to make the outcome decisive.

Hitchcock's inspired play was chiefly responsible for averting a complete rout as Greentree held the opposing side even in the last three periods. Only in the seventh period, however, were the champions able to outscore their rivals. Old Westbury missed almost as many scoring chances as it capitalized. Fully three-quarters of the game was played in Greentree's half of the field.

Phipps was high-scorer with five goals, while Hitchcock and Iglehart, the rival ten-goal stars, each tallied three times. "Pete" Bostwick, diminutive No. 1 for Greentree, was so completely covered by "Sonny" Whitney that he rarely was able to break loose and scored only two goals.

Although rated only at four goals, "Sonny" outshone his six-goal cousin, "Jock," on the defensive. Repeatedly the gold Westbury back turned the play with good shots. Meantime Hitchcock, carrying an extra defensive burden because of his captain's erratic play, was instrumental in checking many old Westbury threats.

The lineups and summary:

Greentree.	Positions.	Old Westbury.
C.H.Bostwick	No. 1	M.Phipps
G.Balding	No. 2	Cecil Smith
T.Hitchcock,Jr.	No. 3	S.Inglehart

Southeast Grid Team Formed

players, performing very successfully the last few years under the colors of Southeast Boys Club, has obtained sponsors this year and will be known as the Southeast Merchants eleven.

With strictly an all-sandlot roster, this group of youngsters have been playing together for years and advancing from class to class as their weights increased under the able coaching of first, Bob McVean, and now Charley McVean, former Catholic University football stars.

Again this season Southeast will present practically the same line-up with such stars as Don Hunt, a halfback; Francis Monaco, guard, and Johnny Di Giorgi, tackle, heading an imposing array which includes Bo Mertens, Bumps Wilkinson, ends; Bill Kemp, center; Joe McQuillan, tackle, and Paul Dement, Joe Dement and George Brooks, in the backfield.

Replacements include Phil Cassidy, Gordon Hopkins, Reds Scheible, former Eastern High football and basketball luminary; Mike Simone, former St. John's athlete; Gene Bond, Vince Connolly, from Gonzaga, Tommy Allen and Richard Mertens.

Present arrangements call for a squad of 16 and games are being scheduled with leading 150-pound teams, the home contest to be played at Fairlawn. The opening encounter will find Silver Spring Merchants invading Fairlawn on Sunday, October 3.

By Dan Craig.

Three proud little ships lay quietly moored at the Corinthian Yacht Club on the historic Potomac last night, after a gruelling 500-mile President's Cup Regatta race from New York, their battered salt-streaked pilothouses bearing mute evidence of a desperate battle with heavy seas off the treacherous Jersey Coast.

A distinguished committee, headed by General Chairman James A. Councilor of the President's Cup Association and Regatta Queen Mary Louise Colbert, pretty 22-year-old daughter of Capt. L. O. Colbert of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, was on hand at Corinthian to greet the winner.

Miss New Jersey, smallest of the three, crossed the line off Hains Maryland Yacht Club, the 32-foot Miss New York, piloted by Vice Commodore Arthur Middleton, of the United States Power Squadron and the tiny 26-foot Miss New Jersey with Ralph Harcourt at the helm, left New York at 1 p. m. Monday and ran into heavy weather almost immediately.

The three reached Atlantic City shortly after 9 the same night, stopping just long enough to refuel before again heading out for the run down the storm-beaten coast to Capt May. Other stops were Chesapeake City, Md., at the headwaters of the Bay, Solomon's Island, Md., and Colonial Beach, Va., half-way up the Potomac, where the cruisers embarked on thet home-stretch at about 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

The run between each refueling Point at 2:46 p. m., the winner with a total of 2,209 points after hanging up a record of 37 hours 48 minutes for the run between New York and Washington. Miss New York was second with 2,207 points and Miss Maryland third, with 2,094.

Under the able command of veteran blue-waterman Ralph Harcourt, of the Atlantic City Tuna Club, the 26-foot cruiser maintained an average speed of better than 12 M. P. H. for the entire 500 miles, although buffeted by curling seas that smashed a heavy plate glass window in her pilothouse off notorious Brigantine Shoal near Atlantic City Monday night.

In the face of Southwest storm warnings, the fleet comprised of Miss Maryland a 39-footer, commanded by Bill Matthews of the point counted as a lap and the final score listed Miss New Jersey as winner of the first lap on the run from New York to Atlantic City; the third lap from Cape May to Chesapeake City, Md.; and the sixth and last lap of 45 miles from Colonial Beach to Washington.

Miss Maryland, the largest cruiser in the race, bested Miss New Jersey's time in the heavy seas between Atlantic City and Capt May, N. J., on the second lap, while Miss New York, a 32-footer, took both laps in the Chesapeake, the third from Chesapeake City to Solomons Island, Md., and the fourth from Solomon's to Colonial Beach, Va. In earlier dispatches Miss New York loomed as the winner, but Miss New Jersey's fine time from Colonial Beach to Washington gave her the victory by a 2-point margin.

Rival skippers drove their craft over treacherous shoals and shallow sandbars, cutting buoys and other aids to navigation in an exhibition of nerve and skill that would have done credit to a Mississippi pilot in the days of Mark Twain, in the efforts to save a few prescious minutes.

The winning boat, Miss New Jersey, drew 2½ feet of water, which helped her skim over sandbars and shoal spots in the Potomac and the Cheasapeake, and was powered with an 80-horsepower engine. Miss New York, only two points behind her rival, drew less than 3 feet of water and used a similar engine with a 3-to-1 reduction gear, which gave the two identical handicaps.

Miss Maryland, a twin-screw 39-footer, was powered by two 75-horsepower engines. She used 289 gallons of gas on the run, while Miss New Jersey and Miss New York each consumed less than 200 gallons.

Tim Stapleton Goes to Center For Colonials

"Botchy" Koch, line coach, took careful note of Stapleton's work, his passing, charging and defensive play, and at the end of a brief scrimmage nodded his approval. Stapleton will do until they get another man ready for the job, when he is scheduled to return to his rightful position at guard, and may keep right on being center if his work continues at its present standard.

Al Halberg, Haringer's understudy, was supposed to take over the center duties, and probably will when he gets in condition, but when that will be is problematical. Meanwhile Ted Cottingham, another guard, is being groomed for the berth, just in case something happens to Stapleton in the meanwhile. This pair will help out during the season at both positions.

"Dutch" Bergman discovered a new and reserve quarterback yesterday when Johnny Fiorellino stole the show at Brookland in a vigorous scrimmage. The youngster's long suit appears to be long-range, accurate passing, but he also runs well, and seems to fit in nicely with Bergman's plans.

"Irish" Carroll and Rocco Pirro, a bulky fullback, served warning on Canisius that the Cards will be dangerous Sunday even though cast in the role of underdogs.

Georgetown got back on regular schedule yesterday with a two-hour workout featuring scrimmage. The staff is devoting most of its time to the backfield, trying to whip a regular quartet into shape for the inaugural a week hence with Shenandoah. Thus far no first team has been announced, and probably will not be selected until Saturday at earliest.

Indoor Rassle Season Starts Here Tonight

Joe Turner, the local wrestling impressario, ushers in his indoor wrestling season tonight at Turner's Arena, and also ushers out for keeps all smoking in his Fourteenth street emporium.

Headed by Ray Steele, the Glendale, Calif., Adonis, and Al Mercier, the clever Frenchman, the wrestling card for the first time since Turner opened the door of his arena a few years ago will be minus the customary nicotine.

For Turner, himself a habitual cigar smoker, announced yesterday to be effective tonight, there will be no more smoking except in the lobby and rest rooms.

From hundreds of spectators, and from fighters and wrestlers alike came demands to eliminate the heavy smoke that has made fighting and wrestling uncomfortable for the participants and has drawn protests from the weekly cash customers.

In bold relief over the walls of the lobby and arena are signs which read , "No smoking, except in lobby and rest rooms.

Turner and his staff are confident this announcement will increase instead of hurt his business. He has the backing of the National Boxing Association, and the National Wrestling Association, which are trying to wipe out smoking in indoor plants throughout the country.

Some new faces are wrestling in support of Steele and Mercier. Billy Hanson, the speedy Salt Lake City grappler who was a wow out on the Pacific Coast, is back for his second straight shot, meeting Reb Russell, the Texas Sheriff, in the semi-windup.

Chief Thunderbird, the full-blooded Saanich Indian from Vancouver Island, who enters the ring in full Indian regalia and has promised to toss out seals' teeth to the fans, returns for a duel with Leo Hyatt.

Steele is in his first headline bout here since injuring himself in an automobile accident two years ago. He has won two straight semi-windup bouts, and is ready for the spot he once enjoyed. Mercier, who has been grappling with success on the Coast and around New England, went to the top in a hurry. He beat Rudy Dusek on the Nagurski-Cox title card.

Louis' Softies Win, 8-1, Over D. C. All-Stars

By Jack Munhall.

Donning one glove in place of the customary two, Joe Louis, the Chocolate Clouter and a pretty fair heavyweight fighter, turned "softie" last night in full view of more than 5,000 persons at Griffith Stadium, where he stepped seven fast rounds to no decision.

Armed with a huge mitt, Louis, fat and contented, played the entire seven-inning game at first base and was very peaceful. However, nine other guys, later identified as the Brown Bomber's softball team, ganged up on a helpless Washington All-Star collection, which went down for an 8-1 count before a lot of right hooks tossed by one William Page.

Louis, in four appearances at the plate got an even break,—that is, he walked twice and struck out on two occasions. In the field, where he moved with the characteristic lazy grace which marks his efforts in the ring, Louis handled six chances and committed one error, that on the first play of the game.

The Brown Bombers in their serious moments showed themselves to be a clever, good ball team. They fielded cleanly and were extremely fast, especially on the bases. Page, a slender right-hander with a world of speed, threw with an odd motion a ball as dark as his ebony body, and at the end of seven innings our All-Stars—who were anythink but—could show but four lonely hits for their efforts.

The Bombers threw the hooks into the ball game in the second inning when a terrific home run down the rightfield line by Dick Payne touched off a six-run rally and drove Shanks, local pitching star, from the mound.

Steel Output Curtailed By Low Backlogs

Pittsburgh and Wheeling Districts Note Big Decreases.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 22.—Greatly depleted backlogs have forced steel mills to curtail ingot production, estimated this week at 76 per cent for the country, and adjust rolling schedules downward, Iron Age, said today in its weekly survey of the industry.

"Sharpest reductions in ingot output have taken place in the Pittsburgh and Wheeling districts, in the former from 82 per cent to 72 per cent this week and in the latter from 97 per cent to 85 per cent," the review continued.

"Pronounced weakness in steel scrap, particularly at Pittsburgh, where it has declined $2 a ton on a sale to a leading mill, tends to confirm the less favorable view of autumn prospects for the steel industry. With a drop of 75 cents a ton at Chicago and 50 cents at Philadelphia, the Iron Age scrap composite price becomes $18.25, or only $1.17 above the year's low in June.

"Railroad buying of steel is at low ebb, which gives more than ordinary importance to an order for 10,000 tons of plates placed by the New York Central for car repairs. With car builders reaching the end of their old orders, there is no new equipment buying of importance in sight, though it is confidently expected a satisfactory settlement of the wage and freight rate questions now confronting the carriers will bring the railroads back into the equipment and steel markets.

Special Groups Receive 50% 1938 Budget

New York, Sept. 23.—Approximately half the 1938 budget of the Federal Government, the Index of the New York Trust Co. states in its October issue represents payment of one sort or another "to special groups of people, not primarily for services rendered, but for relief or special aid." This huge sum of $3,500,000,000, the review states, includes all expenditures under the social security act and veterans' pensions and benefits, as well as payments for direct relief or work relief.

"Immediate prospects for any extensive reduction in relief expenditures by the Government are still remote, the report states, and cites figures to show that current expenditures on this score alone indicate an annual outlay of almost $2,500,000,000. It is all too apparent that only a decisive stand upon the part of the Government in cutting relief rolls, and co-operating with industry for the transfer of WPA workers to private enterprises, combined with the economic administration of such relief as must be extended, can give any promise of reduction of the heavy burden the country is still carrying.

"The absorption of the unemployed in industry is the goal toward which the country must work. Everything which slows up this process is fastening the incubus of relief upon the American people just that much more strongly."

Electricity Output Increases for Week

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended September 18 was 2,280,792,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 5.9 per cent over 2,154,276,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week and 12.4 per cent higher than 2,028,583,000 kilowatt hours in the like week of 1936, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The more than seasonal advance carried the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, to 121.6 from 120.8 in the previous week.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular in Dull Trade; Bonds Steady, Corn Up.

New York, Sept. 22.—Markets slipped a little further into the rut of dullness out of which they were jolted by the heavy selling recently and the subsequent partial recovery. Stocks were easy at the opening, higher in most departments before noon, and irregularly lower at the close to a dull afternoon. Government bonds kept a steady tone. French francs were supported. Commodities were firm except for cocoa, although wheat futures receded slightly. Turnover was around three-quarters of a million shares.

Stocks rose and fell over a wider arc than was the case yesterday. In general the morning saw firmer prices than did the afternoon, but the turnover was small throughout, the market was rather thin and response to any news was dull. During the early advance the old leaders, Steel and Chrysler, kept in front, and the rails managed to firm a little. At their best the active stocks could uncover gains of 2 to 3 points. In that section were Steel, Chrysler, Santa Fe and Bethlehem. Aallied Chemical jumped 5 points.

Stock Movements.

Miscellaneous issues responded to special influences. Para Mount's 6% prior preferred rose 7 points after several bids and offers had appeared on the ticker tape. Its action followed the voting of dividend arrears. Lehigh Portland Cement convertible preferred opened unchanged at 110 a share. The same price yesterday was 81 points last March. It is currently quoted under its previous sale recorded on a yield basis. The price of last March was based on the privilege of converting into four shares of common, then quoted around 47 a share, compared with the current quotation of 22 a share.

Metal and mining stocks held their drift toward better prices. Smelters added more than a point to its prevous day's gain. Senator Pittman's virtual assurance that no reduction in the silver price would be made to domestic producers may have been a factor in the metal share market, for although silver is merely a by-product of base metal mining, the returns from it help to pay expenses. Moreover, if the Government is going to pass up the opportunity given it this winter to discontinue the bonus to silver producers, it would appear unlikely that it will give up any other of its many inflationary and money wasting schemes.

Yield Adjustment.

Certain other markets are responding to special conditions. The price of beef steers mounted in Chicago to a new high level for the past 18 years, and only yesterday Government authority promised no downturn in meat prices for a long time. The cost of food, without much doubt, is going to rise and a good deal further, and that will tend to keep alive the unrest in labor and the uncertainty over production costs and probably volume of consumption at higher prices.

Business indices give no great support either to those who think we are headed for a considerable decline in trade or to others who think the recovery has a long distance yet to go. Assuming that we are now on a level along which we can travel for some time, the fall in stock prices is understandable—even without the element of distrust of Washington. Prices always run a little ahead of profits, as buyers try to discount future increases. When the future grows uncertain, the prices of stocks fall to a ratio of price to profits in line with current results and with some allowance made for a decline.

New SEC Chairman.

Selection of William O. Douglas as the chairman of the SEC, succeeding Mr. Landis, surprised no one. Many rumors had gone the round, but the best information all along held that it would be either Douglas or Saperstein, and when Mr. Saperstein left the SEC recently the tipoff was given. In general, stock exchange members seem somewhat critical of Mr. Douglas, and on two counts: No. 1 is the alleged unfamiliarity of the new chairman with securities markets and finance in general; No. 2 is the supposed radicalism of the chairman, an impression gained partly from the nature of addresses made by him. On his first day in office Mr. Douglas gave a hint of both improvement and the opposite. He promised a speeding up of action on some matters which have been neglected to the detriment of the market and also promised to simplify certain procedure, as, for instance, registration of new securities and the prospectus.

Economics and Market.

Nobody seems to know what a SEC official means when he talks about manipulation. He may mean that he regards any trading by brokers of the short turn variety as manipulation, or he may stop at any of the way stations. As for the reference to market trends, it can only be wondered what Mr. Douglas really has in mind if he thinks that market "trends" are influenced by any but "economic forces." Should he take the view that after all a day's or week's flurry in the stock market is not a trend, and that a trend cannot possibly be influenced by any but economic forces, then the logical interpretation is that the SEC does not intend to do anything. Clearly the SEC does intend to do a great deal in market supervision, but what it can do in case it finds that, for example, "outside interference" with market trends comes from Washington is a question.

Foreign Dealings.

In a special letter on the market, Jacques Cohen observes: "The American speculative mind is much concerned with foreign selling—particularly that from Amsterdam. Was the foreign mind aware of political developments with which we were not acquainted? Some people conjectured that the foreign selling might be in anticipation of certain war moves. But that analysis did not stand up because neither wheat nor rubber has been strong nor has sterling been weak. Last Saturday's market, which experienced a sudden and drastic decline, when analyzed is found to have been 29 per cent of trading by volume in 15 issues, practically every one of which had an international market. There was no general domestic liquidation.

Pere Marquette R. R. Prior Stock Ups $7

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Pere Marquete Railway prior preference stock sold at $72 a share, a jump of $7 in the first sale of the week of the New York Stock Exchange today.

The sharp rise came as the market absorbed the news the road's directors had voted back dividends of $10 a share on the issue, clearing arrears, and also a dividend of $1.25 for the quarter ending October 31, this year.

Corn Jumps 8-Cent Limit In Wild Trade

Increased Margins to Be Required to Stop Speculation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Hectic trading conditions in September corn contracts swept prices aloft about 8 cents a bushel today, the extreme immediate permissible limit for any 24 hours period. The day's Apex quotation, $1.12⅛, was current just as the final gong sounded.

So strained did the corn market situation become that in an attempt to put a brake on fresh speculation in September corn, the board of trade clearing house announced greatly increased funds or so-called margins as a pre-requisite for trades were effective at once.

At the close, corn futures as a whole were ⅝ of a cent to 8 cents above yesterday's latest quotations, with September $1.12⅝@1.12½, December 85⅛, May 65¼@65⅝. Simultaneously, wheat was unchanged to ½ cent lower, September $1.05⅝, December $1.05⅝@1.05¾, May 1.07¼@1.07⅝; oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, December 31, and rye varying from ¾ decline to ⅜ advance, December 79⅛@79¾.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 22—There was a continued good demand for securities and prices in today's stock market moved higher. The industrial group was exceptionally firm with tobacco, motor, rayon, and chemical shares in good demand. Mining and oil issues held steady, although some selling of oil shares came from Amsterdam. Home rails, gilt-edged stocks and foreign bonds remained steady, while transatlantics eased after early firmness.

Paris—The dollar closed with a firm tone, rentes gaining 20 to 35 centimes. Bank of France issue moving up 130 francs and Suez Canal 330 francs. The industrial group was firm, while slectric issues sold lower.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed steady, ½d net lower. There was only a small demand for cash wheat and reports from Argentina continued favorable. Bombay traders purchased a fairly large amount of cotton, but the market reacted under local selling and prices were unchanged to 2 points lower at the close.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

Pressure on the French franc was noticeable in foreign exchange dealings yesterday after Tuesday's upthrusts against the dollar. The unit edged down a little as the British pound also lost ground in terms of the dollar.

The franc dropped .00⅜ of a cent to be quoted at one time at 3.41¾ cents while the discount on the 90-day forward franc widened to .14 of a cent compared with .13 of a cent yesterday.

Sterling sagged ¼ of a cent to around $4.93½. The Holland guilder kept even at 55.24 cents and the Swiss franc was unchanged at 22.97 cents.

In London the dollar was quoted at 4.95½ to the pound, up ⅛ of a cent compared with 4.93⅝ for sterling in New York overnight. French francs ended at 144.94 to the pound against 145.94 previously.

The dollar in Paris closed at 3.416 cents to the franc compared with New York's overnight rate of 3.423 cents to the franc.

Curb Irregular In Dull Trade

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Selected specialty stocks eased a point in a restricted curb market today. Price shifts were confined to minor fractions for the most part with little evidence of a definite trend.

General dullness was enlivened by a spurt of 3 points in Sherwin Williams 111. Pan American Airways also gained 1¼ to 50.

Down around a point were Aluminum Co. at 121, McWilliams Dredging 16½ and Pittsburgh Plate Glass 111. Fractionally lower were American Light & Traction 16, Gulf Oil at 47¼, Northern States Power "A" 18, Poneer Gold 3½ and United Lght & Power "A" 4½.

Edging up a trifle were Creole Petroleum, Cord Corp., American Gas & Electric, Cities Servce, Sunray Oil, Wright Hargreaves and Pantepec Oil. Volume totaled 150,000 shares compared with Tuesday's transfers of 196,000 shares.

The estimate was 58,800 barrels higher than the daily average estimated for September and was 12 per cent higher than the actual demand for domestic crude for that month. The Bureau said the increased demand indicated for next month probably could be accounted for principally by an abnormal export situation and unusually low gasoline yields.

C. I. O. Brands Maritime Body 'Rubber Stamp'

By the United Press.

Maritime unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization last night charged that the United States Maritime Commission is acting as a "rubber stamp" for ship owners in refusing to approve a $250 bonus and $25,000 insurance demand of the unions for seamen entering war zones.

The charges were made at the end of a conference between officials of the maritime unions, the Maritime Commission, and the Dollar, Export and Lykes Steamship companies.

The unions represented were the National Maritime Union and the American Radio Telegraphers Association.

Union representatives termed the meeting unsatisfactory, and said the protection of lives of seamen in danger zones would "have to be settled by negotiation between the unions and shipowners."

The "rubber stamp" charges were made by Ralph Emerson, national legislative representative, and Joseph Curran, organizer, for the union.

Several weeks ago the union threatened to call a strike on the steamship Wichita as it left Baltimore with a cargo of 19 planes for China, unless the seamen were given a $250 bonus. The planes, however, were unloaded at San Pedro, Calif., after President Roosevelt banned Government ships from carrying munitions to either China or Japan.

Maritime union representatives charged that the commission position was one "to provide for open support by an agency of the U. S. Government for the rebel cause in Spain and for Japan in its undeclared war on China."

How Dog Saved Him In China Bombing Told by Survivor

The story of how a pet bulldog's barking saved his master's life and how the master in turn saved the pet in the Shanghai bombing of the S. S. President Hoover, was told on arrival here yesterday by P. W. Reeves, of the staff of Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippines.

The day before the liner was bombed the dog, Judy, barked all day. "That was one of the reasons why I changed cabins," Mr. Reeves asserts, adding that his first cabin—No. 304—was blown to bits when the first bomb hit.

When the bombing began he was on deck, Judy in the new cabin—No. 418—directly below his former one. He ran down, picked up the dog and took her to the dining room, where other passengers were huddled. That moment a second bomb hit the ship, exploding in cabin 418.

Move May Test Power of Factions Within Maritime Unions.

The move appeared destined to provide a test of relative strength of the battling elements within the powerful Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

C. I. O. forces claimed numerical control within the Maritime Federation, with three of the eight unions already fully affiliated, and with one having a provisional C. I. O. charter.

Emmett said he bumped Mrs. Dennis when their skates locked, but that the young wife was not injured.

County Answers Duke Power Suit

By the Associated Press.

Greenwood County, S. C., told the Supreme Court yesterday Public Works Administration loans and grants for publicly owned hydroelectric projects were constitutional because they promoted the general welfare by reducing unemployment.

It advanced this contention in urging the tribunal to refuse to review a decision by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals upholding a $2,852,000 PWA loan and grant for an electric plant at Buzzard Roost, in Greenwood County.

A review has been sought by the Duke Power Co., which challenged constitutionality of the Government's activities.

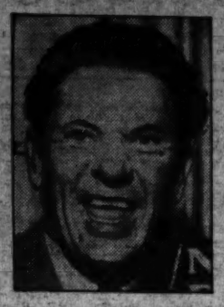
Bob Burns Says—



I suppose psychology is a wonderful thing but it ain't gonna do anybody any good unless they understand it. One time one of them lecturers come through my home town and he told the audience how foolish it is to let little things annoy you. He got pretty excited tellin' the people how to shut out all outside influence.

About that time a baby down in the front row started to cry and the louder it cried the louder the lecturer talked. Finally the baby's mother got up and started out and the lecturer says, "Wait a minute, lady, you don't have-ta leave. That baby isn't annoying me!" The mother turned around and glared at the lecturer and she said, "Oh, he ain't, ain't he? Well, you're annoyin' him!"

Medley Pledges Milk Price Cut For Arlington

Will Seek Legislation If Commission Hearing Fails to Help.

Addressing the meeting of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County yesterday at the Cherrydale Methodist Protestant Church, William D. Medley, Democratic candidate for re-election for his third term to the General Assembly, in outlining the work of the State Milk Commission, stated that he has succeeded in having the commission announce a public hearing October 11 at the Arlington County Courthouse.

Medley declared he felt it only proper to exhaust all means first with the commission in an effort to bring about a satisfactory solution to the price of milk in this area, before either taking it to the Governor or to the General Assembly at its next session.

Should the commission fail to bring about a satisfactory solution, Medley declared if elected he would seek legislation to bring relief to the citizens of Arlington County.

While the commission has agreed to come to Arlington County and hold a public hearing, there will be no relief to the consumers in this area as a result of the hearing, Gordon declared.

The following members were elected to a nominating committee to prepare a slate of officers to be elected at the November meeting: Mrs. Edith Simpson, Mrs. Jesse Roberts, Mrs. Walter Warner, Mrs. Daisy Payne, Mrs. Harry K. Green and Mrs. Pauline A. Smith.

'Substitute Secretary of Agriculture'

MRS. MARY CONNOR MYERS,

42-year-old Government lawyer from Fairfield, Iowa, now technically Secretary of Agriculture, under terms of the Federal marketing act, to hear protests of Boston milk distributors who contend the act is unconstitutional. Two years ago the AAA failed to publish a report Mrs. Myers made on conditions of Arkansas sharecroppers, thereby causing wide comment.

Low Bid Fails On HighSchool In Alexandria

Motion to Accept It Dies for Lack of Second; Committee Named.

A motion to accept the low bid on construction of a 20-classroom addition to Alexandria's George Washington High School died for want of a second at a special meeting of the city council last night.

The low bid of $144,000 had been submitted by T. Calvin Owens, Bethesda (Md.) contractor. The motion to accept the bid was made by Councilman Henry O'B. Cooper.

After the motion had been killed, Councilman Louis C. Barley moved a committee be appointed to consider employment of local labor, and purchasing of local material in the construction project. Mayor Richard L. Ruffner and Councilmen William T. Wilkins and Charles L. Burgess were appointed to the committee.

Owens' bid was the lowest of nine. Only local bidder was David E. Bayliss, whose estimate of $159,422 was next to the highest.

Ship Models Ready to Refight Revolutionary Battle Tonight

Description of Pageant Will Be Read by Conrad Nagel.

John Paul Jones, America's first great naval hero, will be remembered tonight, when the good ship Bonhomme Richard, and the British man-of-war Serapis, again "battle" in a re-enactment of their famous encounter at the Water Gate.

The event, which will begin at 8:30 p. m., will launch the power boat races of the President Cup's Regatta.

Replicas of the men-of-war were completed yesterday by the Navy Department and are now moored at the Water Gate, awaiting the signal which will put into play one of the greatest displays of fireworks ever witnessed in Washington.

Exactly 158 years ago today John Paul Jones, commanding the Bonhomme Richard, sailed into English waters and met the Serapis in what developed into America's first great naval victory.

'Queen' Will Watch.

Thes pectacle tonight will begin with the introduction of Miss Mary Louise Colbert, Queen of the Regatta, who will come up the Potomac aboard a Coast Guard cutter, convoyed by gayly lighted cruisers from local yacht clubs. Miss Colbert and her ladies-in-waiting will then take a box at the Water Gate. At 9 o'clock the Bonhomme Richard and Serapis will begin the engagement.

Immediately following the battle, the Marian Chase dance group will perform several Colonial dances, after which another fireworks display will depict the British bombardment on Fort McHenry. As a finale, Miss Doris Doe, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Nagel to Read.

In order to give the spectators a more thorough appreciation of the battle, the regatta committee has prepared a script to accompany the re-enactment. This script, a complete explanation of the various maneuvers, will be read by Conrad Nagel, film-star. Nagel was persuaded to attend the pageant, after he was told that more than 500 bombs would be exploded in the battle. The actor said that he was a "sucker" for fireworks.

In event of inclement weather, the pageant will be postponed and adequate warning given by radio and the newspapers.

Tomorrow night, after the outboard events have been completed, a parade and celebration along Pennsylvania avenue between Seventh and Seventeenth streets will occupy the soptlight. Plans call for street dancing at various points on the Avenue. Four bands have promised to provide music. These are the Washington Gas Light, Tall Cedars, Elks and Shrine bands.

Two silver loving cups will be awarded by the regatta committee to the business houses, between K street, Pennsylvania avenue, Seventh and Seventeenth streets having the most attractively decorated windows.

Modified traffic regulations will be in effect during the regatta. For tonight's pageant the following rules will begin at 6:30 p. m.:

No parking will be allowed in that portion of West Potomac Park south of Constitution avenue, west of Seventeenth street, north of Tidal Basin road.

Westbound traffic will be detoured north at Twenty-sixth street and south of Virginia avenue.

Silver Spring Waltons to Open New Trout Stream Next April

Trout fishermen will have a chance to test their skill in Montgomery County for the first time next April, thanks to the activity of B. F. Stifler, president of the Silver Spring Izaak Waltons.

Through the work of the Silver Spring Chapter of the league and its head, a plan to have county streams stocked with trout by the Maryland State Conservation Commission has become partially successful when one stream—Paint Branch—received commission approval.

A 5-mile section of Paint Branch appears to be a satisfactory habitat for trout, officials said, and therefore a "sufficient number" will be placed in the stream in time for the opening of the season on April 1.

Experts for the commission and the State game department made a survey of the waters recently. Stifler and other sportsmen had created artificial pools and other aids to trout propagation in Paint Branch, the experts reported.

The burdens of Fishing Creek and Hunting Creek, in Frederick County, are expected to be relieved by the opening of Paint Branch to trout fishermen, it was said.

New York Shrugs At News Duce's Son Arrives Tomorrow

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Premier of Italy, will arrive here tomorrow on the Italian liner Rex, but indications tonight were that neither celebrity-loving New Yorkers nor Fascist baiting Communists would see him.

As head of a new Italian motion-picture company, Il Duce's 21-year-old son is bound for Hollywood with Hal Roach, the director, on business. State Department, customs and Coast Guard officials would not discuss precautions being taken for his arrival. It was reported he would be transferred to a Coast Guard cutter down the bay and taken to Newark, N. J., to board a plane for the West.

The State committee of the Communist Party telegraphed Secretary of State Cordell Hull today demanding the deportation of young Mussolini, asserting the purpose of his visit "is to conduct Fascist propaganda."

Lions Make Good Meal Over Prairie Dog Pie

Estancia, N. Mex., Sept. 22 (AP).—Beaming with health on the "morning after," a hardy little band of local epicures today hailed a new delicacy—"prairie dog pie."

U. S. Firms, Funds Frozen, May Quit Japanese Market

Tokyo, Sept. 22 (AP).—Japan's rigid wartime restrictions on imports and the remittance of funds abroad compelled many American and other foreign business houses here to consider today withdrawal from this market.

A survey showed American business houses have 30,000,000 or 40,000,000 yen ($8,700,000 to $11,600,000) frozen here by restrictions on foreign remittances. German firms—in spite of Japan's anti-Communist pact with Germany—ranked second to Americans in amount of business adversely affected.

Only those American firms importing machinery and goods considered urgent for war purposes have not been harmed by Japan's economic mobilization for the conflict with China.
